New 3-in-1 Pay-as-Earn Income Tax Plan Ready

House Ways, Means Subcommittee Again Ducks Forgiveness Question, However

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

A House Ways and Means Subcommittee yesterday completed action on a new three-in-one pay-as-you-earn income tax collection system for the Nation's estimated 44 million individual payers, but ducked a decision on how much tax forgiveness or doubling up would accompany its projected start on July 1.

The controversial forgiveness question was tossed back to the full Ways and Means Committee, in what some members said might turn out to be the first half of a double play, of which the second half would come when the full committee turned the same problem over to the House to decide.

May Report More Than One Plan

The committee, it was suggested, might report more than one forgiveness plan to the House, and let a choice be made on the floor. At present no single plan is thought to have support of a majority of the 25 Ways and Means members. A maneuver of this kind has been used in the past, one member recalled, in dealing with touchy political-financial topics, and has been discussed as a way out of the present tie-up.

Representative Cooper (Democrat) of Tennessee, chairman of the subcommittee, emphasized that the decision to approve the new collection system was unanimous but tentative. Ways and Means Chairman Doughton ordered a meeting for Monday to receive the subcommittee report and start work on the forgiveness question.

How It Would Work

As described by Cooper, the collection system would work this way:

1. Salary and wage earners would be subjected to a 20 per cent withholding levy on taxable income. Three per cent of the total rate would be applied to income over $624 a year to cover the victory tax, the remaining 17 per cent would be levied as an income tax on earnings over $550 for single persons, $1320 for married, with an extra $385 ex-

'Bloody Herrin' Tamed by War Work

The mining towns of Herrin, Carbondale and Marian, once famous for strikes, feuds and misery, have been transformed by the coming of a war plant into that Southern Illinois area. So reports Agnes E. Meyer in Sunday's Post, where her next article in the America's Home Front series deals with the changes the war has brought to the district between Louisville and St. Louis. And her findings bear tribute to the production program of the Army. You'll enjoy reading this story of cooperation between private industry, labor and the Army.

You Can't Wait

ALL American eyes turn to the Nation's Capital for an example of patriotic duty. In no respect is this more manifest than in the Red Cross drive. Red Cross workers from headquarters in Washington find themselves faced with this inquiry: What is Washington doing? They have to confess that this city so far has the worst record of any city in its population class. We have raised only 17½ per cent of our quota!

Think of it! We are lowest on the list, and some cities—Milwaukee, for instance—are already 60 per cent on the way to their goal. This newspaper wants to shake Washington out of its lethargy. The Red Cross in wartime should not have to ask for high pressure salesmanship. Just one appeal should be sufficient to put its campaign over the top. And the Nation's Capital should lead the way, not trail in the rear. Living here confers on us a special responsibility to the country at large. Other obligations upon Washington should be equally decisive. The Government payroll has gone up by leaps and bounds. There is no unemployment.

We know some of the excuses which have made many of us hang back. "I give to the Red Cross back home." This won't do. You earn your salary in Washington, and you should give in Washington. "I'll wait till I've paid my taxes." Perhaps, when you realize how much the success of this drive depends upon Washington, you will hurry up with both. In any case this campaign can't wait.

The men on the fighting front can't wait. They have to be ready for instant action. So does the Red Cross in succoring them. As we write American boys are being taken prisoner. Their lives might be saved—certainly brightened—by the good offices of the Red Cross in the prison camps. American boys right now are being rescued from death with plasma collected by the Red Cross from blood donors. These activities, and countless more, require finance. At any time the demands on the Red Cross may be multiplied manyfold by a rise in the tempo of war.

Our boys, to repeat, can't wait. The Red Cross can't wait. We can't wait. Washington's quota is $1,555,400. Let us not get another rebuke from the President—we got one last year—for our failure to raise our share. It will be a drag on the war effort as well as on this campaign if we fail to answer the Red Cross call.

Typical Housewife

Homemaker To Help OPA Frame Rules

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Out of the heart of South Dakota, OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown has selected an American housewife—mother of three children—and brought her to Washington to give OPA lawyers and economic theorists a housewife's viewpoint on price control and rationing regulations, it was learned yesterday.

OPA's "typical housewife"—Mrs. Philip L. Crowlie of Huron, S. Dak.—will sit in on technical sessions when regulations are born to persuade the lawyers to phrase their rules in plain language that any housewife can understand. She will then have the job of explaining these regulations to all American housewives, emphasizing the part they must play.

"There is a need to explain the consequence of patronizing black markets, and the effects of hoarding," she said in an interview. "These things can cause the whole program to break down."

Convention Delegate

An enrolled Democrat, Mrs. Crowlie attended the Democratic National Convention in 1940 in Chicago as a delegate from Huron. She stated, however, that she had never been particularly active in politics beyond supporting friends for office. She said she never ran for public office herself.

Mrs. Crowlie explained that although she came to Washington at the beginning of the month at Brown's invitation, papers for her job had not cleared officially through civil service—meaning that she was not officially at work yet. Her exact title and rating would depend on civil service, she indicated.

She was selected from among a number of candidates submitted by various national women's clubs. She has been active in women's organizational work for many years. A life long resident of South Dakota, Mrs. Crowlie was born on a homestead originally settled by pioneers.

For the past 20 years, Mrs. Crowlie's main occupation has been that of housewife. Previously, she spent four years teaching school. Recently, she has been chairman of the local Huron civilian services committee of OCD, and chairman of a committee on the "mobilization of womenpower for produc-

First Red Cross Collections Falling Behind

Special Gifts Unit Reports Only 50% Of Quota Attained

Only 50 per cent of the $500,000 goal of the District Red Cross' special gifts committee has been collected, it was reported yesterday by Special Gifts Chairman John J. Hasley at a meeting of Red Cross leaders and Washington businessmen at the Hotel Statler.

Calling the $241,000 received thus far in the $1,555,400 metropolitan area drive "disappointing," Hasley pointed out that returns are slow coming in and that sickness among volunteer workers has taken "a terrible toll."

Of the amount collected, Hasley said, $51,000 was turned in by the feminine committee, concentrating on socially prominent women; $28,000 by retail stores, $40,000 by utility companies and $13,000 by newspapers.

District Chapter Chairman J. Clifford Folger told the group that the District's total receipts to date in the campaign are 17½ per cent of the $1,555,400 goal, in contrast to 40 per cent collected in the entire Nation's campaign for 125 million dollars.

Cites Last Year's Record

"Last year," Folger said, "Washington made the worst record of any large city in the United States, when it reported 65 per cent of its goal. We cannot repeat that this year, when Red Cross needs are greater than ever before in history."

Campaign Chairman A. G. Neal said the Red Cross currently is receiving the "highest cooperation" from labor organizations, but that three large firms have refused to organize their employes for purposes of solicitation because "it might establish a precedent."

"That is precisely the kind of

Defendants Face New Charges In Nazi Network Prosecution

Speedy prosecution on new charges loomed last night for the 34 defendants in the Nazi network conspiracy case. Other suspects may be accused with them.

This was the boomerang result of a major victory won by the defense in the fifth day of preliminary hearing of the conspiracy case in the District Court.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins ruled that there were technical flaws in Count One of the conspiracy indictment, and struck it out. This count charged the 34 with plotting before Pearl Harbor to stir up mutiny and disloyalty in the armed forces.

Justice Adkins, however, overruled several defense objections to Count Two, which charged a similar conspiracy since the outbreak of war. Moreover, the justice upheld the assertion of Special Prosecutor O. John Rogge that Count Two properly included all but one paragraph of the 39 pages of Count One.

These pages set out in detail the operations of the alleged conspiracy—the use of organizations ranging from the America First Committee to the German American Bund and of publications ranging from the Congressional Record to the Weekruf und Beobachter.

Justice Adkins' decision also left in force the similar indictment obtained by Special Prosecutor William Power Maloney last summer. This accused 28 of the pres-

Bankhead Bill

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

America's food prospects are so bleak "it is dangerous to reduce the number of workers for any purpose," the Senate Military Affairs Committee reported yesterday when recommending passage of the Bankhead bill to freeze present producers of agricultural products in their jobs for the remainder of 1943.

Farm manpower needs surpass those of the military services or of munitions plants, the committee declared as it presented "grassroots" figures to show 71 per cent of the country's county agents expect the number of acres in food production will have to be reduced this year because of labor and machinery shortages.

Cite Machinery Shortages

Even with the farm labor freeze, the committee said, prospects of measuring up to last year's production "are almost hopeless of realization." Thirty-one per cent of the county agents estimated the reduction might be 10 per cent below normal, and an even greater number said it might go to 20 per cent below.

Sixty-eight per cent of the agents said machinery shortages were great enough to reduce production significantly in their counties. Shortages of fertilizer, fencing and farm supplies, feed, and inefficiency of available labor also were counted significant production threats.

The figures were supplied to the committee by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, who has told Senators that food demands on this country cannot possibly be met in full and that Americans may have to tighten their belts considerably even if his high 1943 production goals should be met.

Claims Discrimination

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming filed a minority report in which he termed the Bankhead bill "class legislation" that would lessen both military and farm morale.

Under its provisions, he said, farm workers could not even move from one farm to another without approval of their Selective Service boards. If they should make such a move, they would be subject to full penalties invoked against regular military draft dodgers.

O'Mahoney declared the Tydings amendment to the Selective Service Act provides deferment for all essential farm workers. Since Congress has not been satisfied with the definition placed on "essential" farm workers by the Department of Agriculture, the War Manpower Commission, and Selective Service, he declared the Congressional duty was to give its own definition—and not present a new and unfair substitute.

Massed Aircraft Smashed Convoy In Bismarck Sea, War Official Says

More and Better

The One-Two

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Army Air Force chiefs said last night the amazing victory scored by Allied airmen in the Battle of the Bismarck Sea was the result of new air-combat technique developed by Lieut. Gen. George C. Kenney's Southwest Pacific Air Force.

"It was a perfect example of applying massed air pressure at the right time and right place," said Assistant Secretary of War for Air Robert A. Lovett.

Lovett and aides gave reporters a "blow by blow" account of the three-day air-sea struggle, in which 22 Japanese ships, 72 planes and 15,000 troops were destroyed, compared with Allied losses of four planes and probably only 12 men killed.

Only "One Round"

Outlining the lessons learned from the engagement, Lovett predicted that it would rank in history along with the Battle of Britain and the Battle of Midway as a demonstration of the effect of new tactics on warfare.

"It's the first good case of land-based aircraft going out as a team and just smearing the boys trying to come in," he stated.

Though important as a demonstration of the new technique perfected by General Kenney, the results achieved by the engagement are nothing to "get excited about," Lovett declared. It was only "one round of a long battle," he added.

The War Department air chief explained that Kenney had developed his technique by the trial and error method in prior air combat in the area. Then when the right time came, he said, the "perfect plan was perfectly executed."

Lovett and Army air staff members outlined the tactics as follows:

First—after the convoy was sighted by reconnaissance planes—Kenney sent his heavy, four-engined bombers into action against the Jap convoy, which was described as having a "very strong" air umbrella and "heavy and accurate" antiaircraft protection.

After dropping their bombs—with good effect—the Flying Fortresses and Liberators dropped down and strafed the decks of the ships to slow the antiaircraft fire by killing the crews.

Then after the convoy was dispersed by the heavy blows of the four-engined bombers, the "lighter stuff" was sent in—B-25 medium bombers and A-25 light bombers. They not only bombed the ships, but also went down to low level to strafe the antiaircraft gunners.

At the same time, other planes—including P-40 fighters equipped with bombs and Australian Beaufighters—attacked the enemy bases in the area from which the convoy's air umbrella was coming. They "neutralized" such bases, by preventing additional Jap fighter

Montgomery Inflicts Heavy Losses on Nazis; Russians Near Dnieper

Red Army Retakes Over 100 Localities In Smashing Drive West of Rzhev

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), March 6.—Smashing stubborn Nazi resistance southwest of Rzhev in the Central front sweep toward the enemy anchor at Smolensk, the Russians have freed more than 100 localities in two days, a midnight Soviet communique disclosed today.

One Soviet unit was reported to have crossed an unidentified river which may be the headwaters of the Dnieper, the headwaters of which are 15 miles southwest of Rzhev.

Reds Gain in South

Fresh gains also were reported on the southern front where a 50-mile-wide Red army salient was being driven westward to cut the Bryansk-Kiev railway in the sector between recaptured Lgov and Sevsk. This maneuver also and Sevsk.

This maneuver also was aimed at turning German defenses hinged on Bryansk and Orel to the north and northeast.

Approximately 2000 Germans were reported killed and 1165 captured during yesterday's operations, but the Russians did not claim any advances in the Donets Basin where the Germans for days now have told of successful counterattacks that have regained Kramatorsk, Slavyansk, and Lisichansk in the sector north of Stalino. The German high command declared yesterday that the Russian Third Army was encircled south of Kharkov and was about to be wiped out.

Foe Clings to Caucasus

The Russians also were silent about further operations in the western Caucasus where the Germans still are clinging to positions pivoting on Novorossisk, Black Sea port.

A new Russian attempt to land from the sea at that port was repulsed by German coastal batteries, the Berlin radio said last night in a broadcast recorded by Reuters.

On the Central Front immediate Russian goals appeared to be Vyazma, 80 miles south of Rzhev, and Gzhatsk, 60 miles to the southeast. Although the Russians gave no indication as to how close their armies were to these points, the general direction of the Soviet drive made it likely that they intend to strike behind Vyazma, between there and Smolensk. The latter point is 230 miles west of Moscow.

"The Germans are displaying stubborn resistance, throwing into the battle infantry, tanks and artillery," the communique said. "Our troops are smashing the enemy defenses without giving them the opportunity to entrench on convenient positions."

This central front push has been coordinated with Marshal Timoshenko's northwestern front drive below Lake Ilmen toward Staraya Russa. The midnight bulletin did not mention any fighting on this front where the Berlin radio said battles were occurring along a 50-mile stretch between Staraya Russa and Kholm to the south.

On the northern fringe of the Ukraine the Russians were within 20 miles of the Bryansk-Kiev railway at a point above the railway junction of Konotop. This was in the Sevsk area, where "our troops continued their successful offensive and captured several populated places."

R.A.F. Roars Over Europe For 10th Night

By the Associated Press

London (Saturday), March 6—The R. A. F. sent its big bombers on their tenth consecutive night raid over the Continent during the night and repeated blasts along the French coast were heard on this side of the channel.

The explosions were so terrific that residents reported they rattled windows in buildings in the British side.

Many European radio stations were silent last night, including the Berlin radio, which usually indicates a raid on Germany.

R. A. F. bombers carried their assault on the Continent through the ninth straight Thursday night, laying mines in enemy waters and attacking targets in the industrial area of western Germany. One bomber was lost.

The Air Ministry said Typhoons and Spitfires of the fighter command returned to the attack Friday and made a daylight sweep over the Netherlands coast on which they sank two small enemy torpedo boats and heavily damaged two others.

(An indication the systematic bombing of Germany is taking a heavy toll in Nazi war factories came from a broadcast by the Nazi-controlled Stavanger radio of Norway, which reported that 500 "special repair establishments" were being set up throughout Germany in the electrical indus-

Nazis Reported Massing Fleet Off Norway

Tirpitz Among Ships; Blow Seen At Soviet Supplies

By the Associated Press

London, March 5.—London newspapers published dispatches today saying a powerful concentration of German warships has been assembled in the Trondheim area of Norway.

The stories carried in the Evening Standard and Daily Telegraph, without giving the source of their information, declared the concentration included the battleship Tirpitz, 35,000-ton sister of the lost Bismarck, at least two cruisers of the 10,000-ton Hipper lass and a number of fast destroyers.

The aircraft carrier Graf Zeppelin, which was laid down in 1938, also was reported to be in the group, along with the 26,000-ton battleship Scharnhorst, which was reported in the Skagerrack between Norway and Denmark three weeks ago.

The articles stirred immediate speculation over the possibility that the German fleet was preparing to make a forceful attempt to attack the Allied supply route to Russia.

Unofficial naval sources said there was a possibility the German fleet was concentrating "for one big fight against heavy odds rather than face scuttling as did the high seas fleet in 1918."

The Tirpitz is the pride of Adolf Hitler's navy.

At the time she and the Bismarck were launched the Nazis announced they were of 35,000 tons. But at the time of the sinking of the Bismarck after she had sunk the battle cruiser Hood, British naval officials estimated she was of at least 40,000 tons.

Criticism 'Sort of Unfair'

House Cheers Elliott Roosevelt's Written Plea to 'Let Us Fight'

By William T. Peacock
Associated Press Staff Writer

A burst of applause from both Republicans and Democrats greeted reading in the House yesterday of a plea from one of the President's sons that he and his brothers be allowed to "fight without being stabbed in the back for the sake of politics" by criticism of their war records.

Lieut. Col. Elliott Roosevelt, writing from North Africa to Representative Lanham (Democrat) Texas, referred without naming the Congressman to charges by Representative Lambertson (Republican), Kansas, that the President "jerked" two of his sons from battlefronts.

"Such criticism aimed at men who are fighting for their country strikes me as sort of unfair," Roosevelt said. "They can't answer back. We feel we are fighting for all America. We are not in politics. In the forces there is unity of purpose — the continuation of American freedom and American ideals."

When the applause from both sides of the chamber ended, Representative Baldwin (Republican), New York, declared that Lanham was "voicing the sentiment of those on this side of the aisle, too."

Lambertson was not in the chamber but Lanham said he had shown the letter to him and had pleaded with him to desist from his criticism of the Roosevelt sons. The letter was written January 22.

Lanham said he was reading the communication to the House because Lambertson had again brought up the subject this week. He apparently referred to Lambertson's statement on the floor Wednesday that "Franklin, jr., and

Forces Skirmish In Mareth Area; Enemy Continues Pressure in North

By Harold V. Boyle
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, March 5.—Enemy forces in northern Tunisia kept up their pressure in the face of stiff Allied resistance today while advices reaching here from the southern section reported that the British Eighth Army in its first feeler brush with Axis troops yesterday inflicted on the Germans "very heavy losses—heavy enough to remember."

American patrols clung to Sidi Bouzid, about 25 miles south of Faid Pass where the withdrawing Nazis hold hill positions overlooking the valley.

Reports late tonight said American troops are near the western end of the pass but their location was not given.

The Germans still held on to Gafsa in the south and Hadjeb El Aioun, about 22 miles northeast of Sbeitla, where French patrols had contacted them.

French patrols pushed to a point a few miles west of Pichon in the central sector and in the far south other advanced French elements continued to move forward east of Nefta.

First Army Beats off Attacks

Tank forces of the British First Army were said officially to have beaten off violent German attacks in the streets of the highway junction town of Sedjenane, along the Mateur-Tabarka road in northern Tunisia.

Despite the strength shown by the Germans in the series of attacks in the north from Cape Serrat to Medjez-El-Bab, it was ... that the Nazi successes were only local and that they were marshaling their major strength at the Mareth Line to await a showdown battle with General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army.

In the air, American Flying Fortresses smashed four Axis ships of a six-vessel convoy off Bizerte, damaging the remaining two, and other Allied airmen attacked Axis land transport both in the southern and northern sectors.

5 Enemy Planes Destroyed

In all five enemy planes were destroyed against Allied loss of two craft.

Reports from Cairo told of heavy air action yesterday over the Mareth Line. South African fighter bombers strafed Axis positions and transport between Matmata and Gabes; United States fighter bombers carried out similar attacks.

One Axis plane was shot down in these operations and others were damaged.

The German attack at Sedjenane was thrown in by Col. Gen. Jurgen Von Arnim yesterday with both infantry and armor in a costly effort to seize and control that tactically important junction. The British, with American support, smashed him back with 40-ton Churchill tanks.

A military informant said, "Heavy losses were inflicted on the

Germans Rushing French Defenses 80 Miles Inland

London, March 5 (AP).—Fighting French authorities said today the Germans were rushing construction of defenses in a zone between the region of Soissons and Complegne, at the confluence of the Oise and Aisne Rivers 80 miles inland from the English Channel.

Five thousand French prisoners of war were reported used on the work at Margival, northeast of Soissons and another 2000 west of Soissons.

"It is obvious," a Fighting French spokesman said, "that this locality would become a vital key point to any army which envisaged a withdrawal from the northern coast line."

Phantom Soldier Once Given Up For Dead in South American War

Post Writer Tells Personality Stories Of Marshall Dickerson

By Tom Moore McBride
Post Staff Writer

The story of Marshall Dickerson's "resurrection" on the deserts of North Africa, as reported by Edward Kennedy of the Associated Press, came as no surprise to anyone who knew him at all well.

Kennedy's dispatch from Cairo Thursday said the former Washington Post reporter, reported missing in action with the French Foreign Legion October 30, had been seen in the thick of battle on widely separated fronts by men who had known him well. When the battles were over the phantom fighter always had disappeared.

It is a story no stranger than the one that came out of the jungles of the Gran Chaco when Dickerson fought against Paraguay as a captain in the Bolivian army.

In 1934 Dickerson left Washington for Bolivia. He was a reserve lieutenant in the U. S. Army and had been commissioned in the Bolivian Army to train machine gunners. It was early in the fall when he left and I remember vividly his six foot four figure hanging out from the side of the train with his topcoat flapping wildly about him as he headed for New York and the ship which was to take him to South America.

He wrote shortly after his arrival at La Paz, saying that the country was beautiful, the women pretty and the liquor fine, and that he liked the men he was training.

Won Decoration

Then came a cablegram. It said: "Going to front Villa Montes." The next day the biggest story of the Bolivian-Paraguayan border dispute hit the headlines—the great assault on Villa Montes.

The war ended a short time after that and I heard no more from him.

Two years later I men a man in Miami who had just returned from Bolivia. I asked him whether he had run across an American named Dickerson.

"Do you mean Marshall Dickerson?" he asked. "Why, he's one of the heroes of that war, and for a time they thought he was a dead hero. He led his machine gun company in a furious assault on the enemy and fell in the successful charge. Headquarters was notified that he was dead and he was accorded Bolivia's posthumous decoration. A few weeks later he was brought in from a field hospital to wear the medal!"

Then came a letter from Marshall. He mentioned having been wounded, but though he rambled on about many things he said nothing about having been decorated—a typically Dickersonian trait.

Then Came Word

There was a silence for a few years, then a card from Lake Chad in Free French territory in Equatorial Africa. Marshall wrote that he was in the French Foreign Legion, but no details.

When next there was word, it was in the form of a dispatch by Corpl. Marshall Dickerson, telling of the Bir Hachiem garrison's escape from encircling Italian and German forces.

Then came the word that Marshall Dickerson was missing in action and had been seen falling in a hail of machine gun bullets by his comrades.

I was sure Marshall wasn't dead. It wasn't a matter of wishful thinking. I was sure of it. The dispatch reporting him missing on October 30 came through on Christmas Day, carrying a (delayed) slug on the dateline. A week later I sat down and wrote a piece about Marshall. That piece ended thusly:

"That was the last until the story about him being missing in action. But somehow, I'm sure I'll hear more of Marshall Dickerson."

I'm not the only one who felt that way, however. A week ago a friend who had known Marshall called and I asked whether he had heard of the report of his death.

"I don't believe it," he said. "Hell, they can't kill him." And then he added another mite to the legends which are growing up about Dickerson—about the time he and Marshall needed some gas and Marshall hocked his V. M. I. sword.

Colorful Figure

For Marshall always was a colorful figure. His clothes always hung limply from his tall gaunt frame and he walked in enormous strides, always militarily erect. He wore a close-cropped mustache and smoked incessantly.

The best description I ever heard of him, and one which has a special pertinence now, came from a girl who said he was "handsome in a ghostly sort of way."

One of the favorite stories around The Post city room about Dickerson concerned his novel means of summoning transportation. In 1933, when he was covering police, reporters here carried keys to open police corner phone boxes. Marshall and a girl had been to a party in Georgetown and the hour was late. No taxis were available. So Marshall called No 7 Precinct station and asked them to send a wagon to take him and his girl home.

"Sure," said the sergeant on the desk. He sent the wagon and kept Marshall and his girl in the station for three hours before sending them home.

Marshall was essentially a romanticist. He always gloried in war and deeds of valor. He knew every battle and maneuver of the Civil War minutely. Jackson, Early and Forrest were his favorite generals, and he loved to talk of their forays, when they slashed through Union lines and out again.

He attended V. M. I., but couldn't make West Point because his sight was not up to specifications. Later, when working on The Post he was made a reserve lieutenant and was a little nearer his goal of becoming a soldier. He wanted, of course, to fly, but his eyes were against him in this, too.

Everything he did had a swagger a verve and dash. Once we had been up the Potomac swimming. Dressed, we were starting back across the C. & O. Canal on a pulley ferry. I was standing on the stern and fell in. We had been going to a party from there and I came up cussing.

They Went Wet

"Now I'll have to change clothes and be late for the party," I stormed.

"No you won't," said Marshall, and dived into the canal. "We'll both go wet." And we did, and had a swell time.

Few people ever had more fun out of life than Marshall. That's one reason I don't agree with Correspondent Kennedy when he says he believes Marshall is dead. But he added that the soldiers' stories about him probably will go on, and that Dickerson is well on the way to becoming a legend.

"He would have liked to die that way."

In that I concur.

precedent the Red Cross is trying to establish," Neal said.

Lee D. Butler, chairman of the Blood Donor Center, declared that the blood plasma donations, probably one of the most dramatic appeals in the entire Red Cross, nevertheless must have financial support because each pint of blood contributed means an expense of from one to two dollars in processing.

Don't Want to Ask for Help

"Actually, we've been doing just a fair job," Butler asserted. "Because we have been able to rely on the assistance of the Army and Navy here in Washington, we have been rather inclined to ride on their gravy train. The costs are due to be much heavier—and the District chapter would hate to be forced to ask National Red Cross headquarters for funds to fill in a deficit."

Concerning the contributing power of Washington, Commissioner Guy Mason said: "This city has the greatest number of employed people, the fewest number of unemployables, the smallest amount of public assistance required in our history. Certainly these people who are being paid more than ever before can give up something in order to give to the Red Cross."

Open Red Cross Drive

Col. Gerald A. Thomas, Chief of Staff to General Vandegrift, commander of the Marine expeditionary force at Guadalcanal, helped open the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.'s Red Cross campaign yesterday by stressing the part the Red Cross had played in the recent Solomons battle.

Colonel Thomas also told of the many lives which had been saved through use of Red Cross blood plasma, and the operations of that organization in maintaining contacts between fighting men in the theaters of war. Some 6500 telephone employes heard the speech via loud speakers set up in the various departments here.

German infantry."

Referring to the early phases of the Sedjenane fighting, a spokesman said that a British battalion had been cut off "but a fair number fought their way back to our lines."

"The fighting," he added, "has been both heavy and violent. The enemy has paid a big price for small gains without attaining the true objective. In the last few days we have collected many hundreds of prisoners."

Field reports indicated that the Germans now had been forced from the town.

Finland Forms New Cabinet

Helsinki, March 5 (AP).—Finland formed a new cabinet today under the conservative Prof. Edwin Linkomies, in which ministerial representation of the pro-Fascist patriotic Peoples Party was eliminated and the foreign portfolio was assigned to Sir Henrik Ramsay, Scots-descended shipping leader.

Observers said there was nothing in the records of either Premier Linkomies or Ramsay which would make them unacceptable to Russia, and handicap chances of the nation in peace negotiations.

Giraud Appoints New Aides Here

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, March 5 (AP).—Gen. Henri Giraud announced the appointment today of Henri Hoppenot, former French Ambassador to Uruguay, as chief of services for the French civilian mission in Washington. He replaces Guillaume Georges-Picot.

Hoppenot resigned from Vichy's services on October 29, 1 days before the American landings in North Africa.

Russian Republic Leader Dies in N. Y.

New York, March 5 (AP).—Nicholas D. Avxentieff, former president of the council of the short-lived Russian republic of 1918 and minister of the interior of the Kerensky government, died here yesterday.

Born in Penza, Russia, in 1879, he came to the United States in 1921 as a refugee from the Communist regime.

Pilot, Hurt In Practice, Lands Safely

By Gladwin Hill
Associated Press Staff Writer

At a U. S. Bomber Station Somewhere in England, March 5.—Shot through the shoulder during gunnery practice by a .50 caliber bullet that made a hole as big as a fist, Capt. Henry J. MacDonald, San Francisco, a graduate of the University of Nevada, held on to consciousness for 20 minutes to land his damaged fighter-bomber.

He flew his plane with his left hand and chin, made a perfect landing and climbed out unaided.

A member of the famous "Boomerang Boys," MacDonald was piloting a plane towing a sleeve target on a Flying Fortress gunnery practice flight.

A stray bullet from the hail poring into the target punctured the tire of MacDonald's plane, making it difficult to land. Another crashed through the cockpit behind MacDonald, entered his back just below the shoulder and came out the top of his shoulder. There was a 5-inch rip in the shoulder where the bullet emerged.

MacDonald was knocked out momentarily but recovered and pulled his plane out of a dive at 800 feet despite extreme pain. He said nothing to two other crew members.

Other fliers saw MacDonald's plane peel off and head toward base. It did not get there but, despite the flat tire, it made a perfect landing in a nearby field.

Doctors said there was a good chance MacDonald would recover the use of his arm.

Naval Construction Sets All-Time High

Nazis Drop New Bombs, Britons Hear

London, March 5 (AP).—The Ministry of Home Security warned Britons today against a small new anti-personnel bomb dropped by Nazi planes, saying a number were dropped recently and that they might be scattered over a wide area.

The bombs are the size of a round cigarette can, weigh about four pounds and may explode at the slightest touch, the ministry said.

Eicke Reported Killed

New York, March 5 (INS).—The British radio today told the people of Europe that in fighting near Kharkov, Gen. Theodore Eicke was killed. The broadcast, picked up by the government's Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service, said Eicke "was the inspector of all German concentration camps and one of the most hated men in the Reich. Many attacks have been made on his life."

Milan School Bombed

Bern, Switzerland, March 5 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's Milan newspaper Il Popolo D'Italia was reported by the Swiss Telegraphic Agency today to have announced plans to move the raid-damaged university of Milan to an ancient convent at Bergamo, 30 miles northeast of the city.

130 Combat Surface Vessels, 1400 Planes Accepted in February

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Construction of warships and naval aircraft in February was the largest for any month in Navy history, Secretary of the Navy Knox said yesterday.

Earlier in the day the Maritime Commission announced a new record in February for delivery of merchant ships, also. These deliveries, the commission said, totaled 130 vessels of 1,239,200 tons, including 81 Liberty ships and nine tankers.

Combat surface vessels alone, Knox said approximated 200,000 tons completed last month. This tonnage, he explained, represented more than 130 new ships and 20 cargo ships converted into war vessels.

Aircraft construction set a Navy record, Knox said, with nearly 1400 new airplanes accepted. "Considerably more" than half of these, he said, were combat types.

700 Landing Craft Accepted

In addition to the warcraft tonnage, the secretary said, more than 700 landing craft were accepted, of which above 100 were "large" landing boats.

The Navy Secretary also announced at his press conference a program for building a new type of destroyer escort vessel for protection of convoys against submarines. He said "several score" were in the water now and "we are rushing equipment for them as fast as we can." The major delaying factor, he said, was propulsion machinery but "we are beginning to make real progress on the destroyer-escort program."

Announcement of the program to construct these vessels followed close on the heels of an announcement by the British government that it had adopted a new type escort vessel to replace the light corvette, a class to be called the "frigate." The American destroyer-escort was held by officers at the conference to be superior in performance to its British prototype.

"The destroyer-escort," said Rear Admiral Edward L. Cochran, chief of the Bureau of Ships, "cannot be termed the complete answer to the submarine. It is part of the answer; it will be very helpful."

Corvette Program to Continue

Knox said the destroyer-escort would not replace corvettes despite their superior speed, seaworthiness and firepower. The corvette program, he said, will continue as now laid down.

Designed to operate in teams in escorting convoys, the destroyer-escorts will be mannned by crews now undergoing special training for this arduous and exacting work. The vessels will release destroyers from convoy duty for other more important service where their qualities can be more fully used.

Destroyer-escort ships displace about 1,300 tons, are approximately 300 feet long, with a beam of 35 or 36 feet. Thus they are considerably smaller than modern destroyers and about the size of destroyers in World War I. They will be capable, the public was assured, of fighting it out with submarines on the surface.

These vessels will bear the names of Navy heroes, among the first being christened Jacob Jones, after two destroyers, one of which was sunk in the first World War and the other early in this war. Another will be named for the Reuben James, a destroyer sunk in the Atlantic by a submarine in October, 1941.

The cost of destroyer-escorts will be about $3,500,000, roughly half of a destroyer.

try. The broadcast was recorded in New York by the Government's Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service.)

United States airmen in yesterday's raid on Hamm disclosed that the fighter opposition there was "about the strongest" they had encountered so far. They reported hearing a great explosion and seeing large fires as they left the big railway junction in western Germany.

Fortress gunners downed 14 enemy planes, but 5 American bombers failed to return. Rotterdam was raided by other Fortresses without a loss.

Queen Takes Aces In This Game

CAROLE LANDIS,
the film actress, returned yesterday from a tour of fighting fronts with very interesting trophies pinned to her dress. They included insignia of the Eagle Squadron (top), U. S. Air Force (second from top), French Foreign Legion (third down, left), Grenadier Guards (third row, right), and the R. A. F.

Soldiers Want Glamour, Says Carole Landis

By the Associated Press

New York, March 5.—It's glamour the boys at the front want and Miss Carole Landis of the films believes she succeeded in providing some of it.

The blonde actress was back in New York today after entertaining servicemen in Britain and North Africa: She traveled 38,000 miles, underwent an appendectomy and married Capt. Thomas C. Wallace of the American Air Forces.

About this glamour business: Some of the actresses in her party (comprising Kay Francis, Martha Raye and Mitzi Mayfair) wore helmets and trench coats while close to the front. But—

"I made it a point to wear a sweater," Miss Landis explained. "They proved practical as well as glamorous. And with the use of snoods I managed to keep my coiffure in shape."

Arrival of the troupe in North Africa was heralded in a variety of ways. One soldier, after discussing her with his buddies, advanced staunchly and demanded: "Are you who I think you are?"

"It was enough of a shock for the American soldiers to see white women dressed in American clothes," she added, "but when they discovered who was in the troupe they thought they were seeing mirages after spending time in the desert."

Two days after her wedding she left her bridegroom for North Africa, but returned to Britain later and spent a few days with him.

Busy Dawn to Dusk

All Allied planes were busy from dawn to dusk, shuttling back and forth between their bases and the scene of the battle to reload with bombs, bullets and gas.

During the nights—the convoy was first sighted Monday and attacked Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday—Allied search planes kept them spotted by dropping flares all over the scene.

All of the bombing was from medium or low altitudes, but from various levels in this range.

Army officials said the battle was almost entirely an American Army Air Force show. Some Australian Air Force Beaufighters took part in the mopping up operations, and one Australian Catalina seaplane helped follow the convoy before it was attacked. Except for this one plane, all aircraft taking part were land-based.

Three Cruisers Sunk

Lovett said the Japanese ships sunk included three light cruisers or destroyer leaders, seven destroyers and 12 transports or cargo vessels.

Flying Fortresses first picked up the convoy north of New Britain on March 1, the unit then consisting of seven warships and seven transports and cargo ships. The next morning, heavy bombers—mostly B-17s with a few B-24s, and escorted by P-38 fighters—attacked the ships. They hit them in three waves.

Two vessels were sunk—one within two minutes after receiving a direct hit—and six were damaged by hits or "near misses."

The following day, the convoy was joined by eight other vessels, and Kenney sent out everything he had against it.

The convoy was then in the Huon Gulf near its destination—the Jap base at Lae, New Guinea. Enemy landing boats put out from the sinking vessels and Allied fliers strafed and bombed them. Few, if any, are believed to have reached shore.

Next morning, thorough reconnaissance over the whole revealed only two ships afloat—two crippled destroyers—and these were sunk.

'Perfect Play'

In the words of Assistant Secretary Lovett, "it was as near a football coach's dream of a perfect play as you'll find."

Meanwhile, airmen from Admiral Halsey's South Pacific command were hitting the Japs at the other end of the enemy's chain of island bases. Four attacks were made on Nipponese bases at Munda, Buin, Kahili and Ballale in the northern Solomons March 4. The only resistance was from anti-aircraft batteries and all of our planes returned.

Wednesday night, the Navy reported, two Japanese planes attacked Guadalcanal, but no damage was done and there were no casualties.

The Navy communique reported also that American Warhawk fighters attacked the Jap base at Kiska in the Aleutians March 2.

W. Va. Skater Killed By Oil Tank Blast

Middlebourne, W. Va., March 5 (AP).—A small crude storage tank, source of an oil supply for a party of skaters, exploded last night, killing Landis Seckman, 18, and injuring Robert Nichols.

Seckman, who this week took his test for the Army, was hurled 100 feet.

Elliott Roosevelt Protests

his du Pont wife were doing the night clubs of New York" Sunday night while Walter Winchell in his broadcast "dwelt on the magnificent soldiery of Franklin, jr., in Africa."

Elliott's letter followed Lambertson's first raising in January of the question whether the Roosevelt sons—all four are in the armed services—were being shielded from danger on orders from "the Commander in Chief."

On one occasion Lambertson asserted that a "distinguished American" (he did not call him by name) told him the President "lifted" Lieut. Col. James Roosevelt of the Marine Corps from Guadalcanal.

Representative Gore (Democrat), Tennessee, took Lambertson to task at that time, asserting he was reflecting on the integrity of the armed services and that James was ordered back here to teach Marines the style of fighting needed in the Southwest Pacific area.

Text of Letter

The text of Elliott Roosevelt's letter:

"North Africa, Jan. 22, 1943.

"Dear Fritz:

"I am writing you this note because, first of all, you are my Congressman, and, secondly, you have known me for a long time and can speak for me as a citizen of the State of Texas.

"I have just had an opportunity of seeing my father over here, and he gave me the first American newspapers I have seen since I left the States last September.

"In the papers I read something which deeply disturbs me. A fellow Congressman of yours has undertaken to criticize some of my brothers and their war records by stating that two of them were pulled out of combat zones so that they would not be exposed to danger. Inasmuch as I know the Congressman could not be referring to me, because I am here with the troops in North Africa, and because I know that my brother Franklin has been on a destroyer in the North Atlantic and still is, there can be only two brothers to whom the gentleman in question refers, my brothers James and John.

"I happen to know that James has insisted on carrying on, on active duty, even though he is not physically up to the strain of combat. He could easily sit back and not be exposed to actual combat, because if he were anybody else's son he would be exempted from such duty. He is a he of a fine officer and has plenty of guts. Ask any man who has served with him—that is the test! John, my youngest brother, is in the Naval Supply Corps. He's been fighting like hell ever since he got in to go on foreign service, and I know that my father or anyone else isn't going to stop him before this show is over.

"The fact that my brother James has won the Navy Cross for gallantry in action speaks for itself.

"Such criticism aimed at men who are fighting for their country strikes me as sort of unfair. They can't answer back. We feel we are fighting for all America. We are not in politics. In the forces there is a unity of purpose—the continuation of American freedom and American ideals.

"Let Us Fight"

"Please explain this fact to your colleague, and try to explain to him that we, as soldiers, don't care whether or how much he disagrees with the President, but for God's sake let us fight without being stabbed in the back for the sake of politics.

"If I ever get home and am out of the Army I'll be glad to stand up for my own honor, but in the meantime see if he won't lay off until such time as a fair fight can be made of it.

"I don't care whether a man is a Republican or a Democrat. Let's get together and get this damn war won! I'm tired and want to go home and live in peace on my ranch with my family. The sooner the better, too.

"If the Congressman questions my service, you might tell him that I have spent over two-thirds of my service in the past two years on foreign duty. I've been in every lousy spot the Air Corps can think of to send its men. It's not much fun, I can tell you, especially the butterflies that fly around in your stomach when the German gets the range and lets loose everything he's got at your plane.

"Thank you, sir, for passing on these personal sentiments to your honored colleague in the House.

"Sincerely your friend,

"ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT,

"Lieutenant Colonel, Air Corps."

Why Did He Bother? First Lady Asks

Champaign, Ill., March 5 (AP).—Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said today here she didn't think her son, Elliott, should have written the letter defending the war record of his brothers.

"Why did he bother with it?" she asked.

Mme. Chiang Calls for AEF

By the Associated Press

New York, March 5.—An American expeditionary force in China to operate against Japan would show the Japanese that America means business, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek asserted today.

The wife of the Chinese generalissimo explained to a press conference that in any war there were two factors—the military and that of morale.

If America sends planes and munitions, Mme. Chiang said, China has the manpower and that is the military problem.

But, Mme. Chiang declared, if even a small contingent of an American expeditionary force were sent, it would show the people of China, and more especially Japan that America meant business.

Disclaiming any powers as a military strategist, she said that nevertheless she thought that the final push, the big offensive and the decisive victory to defeat Japan would have to come from the mainland of China.

Panama-U. S. Routes Cleared of U-Boats

Balboa, Canal Zone, March 5 (INS).—Sea lanes between Panama and the United States now have been cleared of the Nazi U-boat menace, Rear Admiral Clifford Van Hook, Fifteenth Naval District commander, announced today.

"I could not ask that the situation be any better than it is at present," the admiral declared.

Deschner Meets Labor Committee

Ramy B. Deschner, director of the District area, War Manpower Commission, and the labor management committee of this area met for the first time yesterday and announced that a list of essential civilian activities here would be made public within the near future.

Also discussed were problems of defining the territory to be included in the District area, and a labor stabilization program to be established here upon lines of plans already operating in other cities. It was urged that employers and others submit suggestions for labor stabilization to the local office, 505 K Street Northwest.

Flying Fortress Star Of 'Air Force' at Earle

By Ernest L. Schier

"AIR FORCE." Warner Brothers picturization of an original screen play by Dudley Nichols, with John Garfield, Gig Young, Harry Carey, George Tobias, Arthur Kennedy, James Brown, John Ridgely, Stanley Ridges, Ray Montgomery, Charles Drake, Moroni Olsen, Edward S. Brophy, Richard Lane, Bill Crago, Ann Doran, Faye Emerson, Dorothy Vaughan and Ward Wood. Directed by Howard Hawks. At Warner Brothers Earle.

WITH THE SAME unrelenting impact that its component members have made felt on the enemy's forces, "Air Force," an inspired saga of the skies, made a three-point landing at the Earle Theater yesterday where a capacity audience, drawn by the power of the film to the edge of their seats, watched the unfurling of reel after reel of the log of the "Mary Ann" with bated breath.

Bringing the full realization of the war home, perhaps more forcefully than any other film to date, "Air Force" is strangely enough without what is conventionally known as a "star" or a "story." Yet, paradoxically, it does have both. It's star is a Flying Fortress whose name, "Mary Ann," is a contradiction of its ability to seek out and destroy with utter finality, the enemies of our country. The story has not been conceived by the pen of any one man but is written in the blood and heroism of the plane and crew, and masterly understated in the log of her flight.

It is exactly what it sets out to be, the story of the United States Army Air Force, and it gives that story form and character greater than any other film devoted to any of the armed forces.

With the same knowledge of what makes for uninterrupted action that he brought to "Dawn Patrol," "Ceiling Zero" and "Only Angels Have Wings," Howard Hawks, the producer in conjunction with Hal B. Wallis, has availed himself of the cooperation of the armed services and hitherto secret military documents, to fashion a motion picture unsurpassed for the suspense and excitement of aerial battle. In this he has been aided by the realistic dialogue of Dudley Nichols, who in his own right, has been responsible for some of our finest films.

"Mary Ann" is a Flying Fortress which takes off from San Francisco for Honolulu on December 6, 1941, one of a routine flight of nine planes. Before that flight ends the "Mary Ann" has flown her crew more than halfway around the world through the battles of Pearl Harbor, Wake Island, Manila, the Coral Sea and the bombing of Tokyo. For most of the way she carries her audience with her, too.

During the epic flight of sleepless hours and continual battle, a mixed crew crystallizes into a single force, united in their devotion to their ship and in loyalty to the Air Force. Only a faint touch of romance and humor are allowed to enter into the story, a girl who is sister to one member of the crew and fiancee of another, and a dog named Tripoli who is adept at showing his contempt of "Tojo."

In place of these ordinary devices there is the excitement of long distance flight by dead reckoning instead of radio beam, the weariness of repairs, the tenseness of rebuilding the ship under fire at Manila, and the terrifying destruction of a huge Jap convoy.

There is shocking realism in such scenes as a Jap plane machine gunning a parachuting pilot and the white-hot anger of the avenger as he deliberately mows down the Jap pilot as he climbs from his own burning plane.

Distributing credit for the production would be a difficult job, since all concerned deserve an honored place. With the exception of Harry Carey and John Garfield, the principal actors are unknown, but their performances promise that they will not remain so for long.

Carey and Garfield are particularly excellent, turning in performances that are equal to the best things they have ever done. The former is a gruff yet soft-hearted top-sergeant whose job it is to keep the "Mary Ann" running, while the latter is a maladjusted gunner who learns the spirit of teamwork through the arduous adventures of their flight.

Outstanding of the new faces are John Ridgely, tremendously impressive as the capable, good-natured Irishman who captains the "Mary Ann;" Washington's Gig Young as the co-pilot, Arthur Kennedy, Charles Drake, Ward Wood and Ray Montgomery as the balance of the crew.

In smaller but equally important roles are Stanley Ridges, Willard Robertson, Richard Lane, Bill Crago, Edward Brophy, Addison Richards and Dorothy Peterson.

A somewhat condensed stage show this week heralds the return of Paul Remos and His Toy Boys, who perform an assortment of amusing stunts. Bob Hall's extemporaneous rhyming rounds out the program with three numbers by the Roxyettes and the music of Jo Lombardi.

They Wrote the Headlines in Advance!

James Cagney, Greer Garson Win 'Oscars' for 1942 Acting

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, March 5.—James Cagney and Greer Garson, established thespians but newcomers to the "Oscar" roster, received the Motion Picture Academy's awards early today for the best actor and actress performances of 1942.

Fifteen hundred guests at the academy's fifteenth annual dinner waited anxiously until well after midnight for announcement of the winners of filmland's most coveted honors, bestowed by ballots of approximately 11,000 motion picture people.

For "Yankee Doodle Dandy"

Cagney's award was for his role in "Yankee Doodle Dandy," a Warner Brothers' film, and Miss Garson's for her performance in M-G-M's "Mrs. Miniver," the picture which was adjudged the best production of 1942 and which virtually swept the list of "bests."

Other major awards:

Best supporting performance by an actor, Van Heflin, now an Army lieutenant, in M-G-M's "Johnny Eager"; best supporting actress, Teresa Wright, in "Mrs. Miniver"; best directorial achievement, William Wyler, now an Army major, for "Mrs. Miniver."

"Mrs. Miniver" also was acclaimed the year's best written screen play and the best achievement in black and white cinematography. With "Random Harvest," it brought Producer Sidney Franklin the Irving G. Thalberg memorial award.

"Yankee Doodle Dandy" received the award for the best musical scoring, by Ray Heindorf and Heinz Roemheld, and for the best sound recording.

Miss Garson, native of County Down, Ireland, is a graduate of London University. She appeared extensively on the London stage, where she so impressed Louis B. Mayer that he signed her to a long film contract. She was nominated for 1939 and 1940 academy awards.

"Mrs. Miniver" outclassed "The Invaders," "King's Row," "The Pied Piper," "Random Harvest" and other nominees, and Miss Garson won in the balloting over Bette Davis, Katharine Hepburn, Rosalind Russell and Teresa Wright.

Director Wyler is in Europe, photographing aerial bombings. His wife, Margaret Tallichet, former Dallas, Tex., actress, accepted his award.

"Moscow Strikes Back" was voted the best documentary film, and a special certificate for the best foreign picture went to Noel Coward, for the British film, "In Which We Serve."

Miss Garson's victory was anticipated by many, and the photographers kept her occupied much of the evening posing with Walter Pidgeon and Ronald Colman, with whom she appeared in "Mrs. Miniver" and "Random Harvest," respectively.

Message From Roosevelt

The Ambassador Hotel's Cocoanut Grove was a brilliant spectacle of elaborately attired women.

A message from President Roosevelt to Academy President Walter Wanger, read by Actor Donald Crisp, declared motion pictures are no longer mere entertainment but significant vehicles of constructive human enterprise.

"In total war," he wrote, "motion pictures, like all other human endeavor, have an important part to play in the struggle for freedom and survival of democracy. Those who achieve highly in motion pictures at this time have contributed greatly toward that end."

Gov. Earl Warren and Lowell Mellett, OWI motion picture bureau chief, also addressed the banquet.

Honor Student Mumbles Dialogue

Screen Gangster Marc Lawrence's roles must be a little embarrassing for his former school teachers.

Lawrence was an honor student in languages and won six medals for dramatics, voice and extemporaneous speaking. His speech was his teacher's pride.

After gaining fame on Broadway Lawrence was brought to Hollywood, where he became one of the screen's best known gangster users of educated phrases. In "Submarine Alert," a Pine-Thomas picture, Lawrence plays a foreign spy and he has to mumble his dialogue.

"If some of the teachers I had in school ever see me in this part they'll faint," Lawrence laughed.

Broadway Glossary

New York, March 5.

LAMENT: Monty Woolley went to a reception at the home of William Woodward, and there met Fritz Kreisler. A waiter approached them, and Woolley ordered a highball. "And what will you have—Scotch, or tea?" Monty asked the violinist . . . "Neither," replied Kreisler. "I don't drink and I never have tea, because I'm clumsy with a tea cup" . . . At Woolley's insistence, the waiter brought some tea. Kreisler dropped the spoon, and Monty picked it up . . . "See?" said Fritz Kreisler, extending his hands which have thrilled music-lovers for more than a generation. "I'm nothing but a bunch of butterfingers."

MICKEY ROONEY

MISTAKE: At a South Pacific base, a group of war correspondents gave a party attended by some officers and their aides. In one of the hallways, Sergt. E. J. Kahn, jr., author of "The Army Life"—who now has been promoted to Warrant Officer—met Major General Vandegrift, who headed the Marines at Guadalcanal. "Where can I find a w. c.?" General Vandegrift whispered . . . Kahn, who suspected that the general must have been educated in Britain, directed him to the gentlemen's room . . . "Thank you," said General Vandegrift, "but by 'w. c.' I meant war correspondent."

CAUTION: During the Roosevelt-Churchill conference at Casablanca, one of these men used a French interpreter in the discussions with the French officials there . . . He needed no interpreter, for he speaks French and understands the language perfectly . . . But by using the interpreter, he had more time in which to think about the questions put to him by the French officials, before answering. Furthermore, it gave him an opportunity to check on the accuracy and loyalty of the interpreter assigned to him.

DRESS: All Army and Navy officers flying to and from England are not permitted, under the Portuguese law, to wear their uniforms during the stop-offs in Lisbon. The spies who thrive there immediately flock to a man who wears clothes which obviously were borrowed for this trip and which don't fit him . . . A movie director, now in the Signal Corps, recently reutrned from England, via Lisbon. "What kind of people did you see in Lisbon?" he was asked . . . "I arrived at the casino in my borrowed suit," he replied. "I looked around—and saw hundreds of Peter Lorres."

SPEED: Mickey Rooney, who is shown winning a 200-yard low-hurdles race in a high-school track meet in "The Human Comedy," never had run in a hurdles race before this. Clarence Brown, the producer-director of this picture, photographed the race in sections—two hurdles at a time . . . 150 extras were used as spectators. Rooney, who works best before an audience, spent the free periods between film-shots by pole-vaulting and high-jumping. At the end of the day, Brown said: "Now I'd like to photograph a long shot of the entire race. Make this a real race." The three collegiate trackmen who were hired for this scene lined up against Rooney, who not only beat them, but also came within two seconds of tying the high-school record.

LOCAL: President Benes of Czecho-Slovakia will visit here shortly . . . Maxwell Harway of OPA, who was one of the originators of point-rationing for America, is celebrating the beginning of point-rationing this week by entering the Army as a private . . . This column's newest outlet is the Egyptian Gazette, published in Cairo . . . Spivy, the night club-owner-entertainer, and Fred Keating wanted to participate in "We Will Never Die" pageant at the Garden next Tuesday. "We'll even carry spears," they pleaded to Producer Billy Rose. There will be no spear carriers in the pageant, to Spivy and Keating will carry lighted candles.

LABOR: At the reception for Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, David Dubinsky, head of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, met Hoffman, head of the Studebaker Corp., who asked him: "How about that contribution to China Relief?" . . . "A capitalist—asking labor for money?" said Dubinsky . . . "In these days only labor has money," replied Hoffman . . . The members of the ILGWU have subscribed $50,000 for China Relief, to establish a home for children there.

Eccentric to Croon

Betty Hutton, whose every screen song to date has been a loud-shouting, arm-waving, slam-bang affair, will be permitted to croon softly, melodically and in true ballad style for Preston Sturges' new picture, "The Miracle of Morgans Creek."

Bracken Cast

Eddie Bracken draws one of the best screen opportunities of his career in C. B. De Mille's "Story of Dr. Wessel." He'll play one of nine wounded American sailors rescued from Java by Lieut. Comdr. Corydon M. Wassell.

Marquee—Lesser Evil!

Hollywood, Calif., March 5.—With all this controversy over Eddie Rickenbacker it's too bad the story of his life isn't already in the can. Nothing sells tickets like the kind of publicity he's getting now. . . . No truth to reported engagement of Lew Ayres and Jo-Carroll Dennison. Sure, he's had a few dates with her. He's dated other girls here, too, and that hasn't prevented his dining with Ginger Rogers and her new husband. . . . From the South Pacific Comdr. Gene Markey sends a picture ad taken from a Jap prisoner which announced a triple feature. "Which is doubtless," writes Gene, "one of the reasons for this war. Evidently the Japanese preferred death to triple features."

CHARLES COBURN

It Can't Be Done

In order to go unrecognized Lana Turner has dyed her hair coppery red. She's hiding out at Charles Morrison's ranch near Palm Springs. No matter what the color of Lana's hair is, imagine her going unrecognized! Lana says there's no chance whatever of a reconciliation with Steven Crane. . . . Orson Welles took his physical for the army in New York, was classified 4-F. He's taking another one, hoping to get in. . . . . When a very important man at Twentieth Century sent Orson a note last week inviting him to lunch with a Mexican delegation he received an acceptance written by Orson in five minutes. "That," said the executive, "is the first time in eight years that I've ever had a reply from an actor."

They Honored Him

Bob Hope was really flustered when Eagle Scouts descended on his set in a body to give him a special award. They were so young and earnest that Bob stammered like a schoolboy and said, "You know, I never was smart enough to be an Eagle Scout, but I'm mighty happy to be able to flap my wings with you." . . . Arthur Lake of "Blondie," radio and film, is the proud father of an 8-pound son who'll be christened Arthur Patrick. . . . Michele Morgan's husband, Bill Marshall, is testing for a term contract at Twentieth . . . Johnny Considine's next will be titled "Seattle"—in the erly days of the honky-tonk, when men were men.

Aims High

Von Stroheim is making such strides again in his career he wants to direct. If he does, the first person he'll cast in a picture will be Pola Negri. And why not? She looks wonderful. Incidentally, it's Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer who bought her life story. Wonder if it's for Greer Garson . . . . Found Don Loper shopping for a wedding present to give Ginger Rogers. "What can you give a girl who's got everything?" said he . . . Max Reinhardt and Franz Werfel want to do "Song of Bernadette" as a play on Broadway in late summer . . . Laird Cregar's proud of the fact that he's dropped 30 pounds, but heck! With his appetite he can put it back in a week.

Spare Time Useful

Guess what that lovable rascal, Charlie Coburn, is up to. While playing matchmaker to Jean Arthur and Joel McCrea in "The More the Merrier," he was planning something on his own. Quietly gathered together many of the actors from the original cast of "The Better 'Ole" and at the Players' Club here they'll give a performance of "The Better 'Ole" for the boys of "This Is the Army." While they're about it why don't they remake the picture? It was done once, badly, by Sid Chaplin . . . . "Mrs. Miniver" goes back to the New York Music Hall June 6 to celebrate its opening there a year ago. And when "The Human Comedy" opens at the Astor, Saroyan's name will be first on the billing, above Mickey Rooney . . . When Paul Lukas finishes "Hostages" he'll go back to Broadway for a musical—the same one they want Marlene Dietrich for . . . Lucille Norman of New York's Versailles is engaged to marry Col. G. P. F. Taylor of England. They may wed before she comes out to sing in "Broadway Melody."

Pay-as-You-Go Tax Proposal Is Approved

emption for each dependent.

2. Taxpayers whose chief incomes come from agriculture would be required to pay off two-thirds of their estimated annual liability, both income and victory taxes "at any time" before December 31 in the current year, and the remaining third when they filed their quarterly return on March 15 the next year. This section was based on Canada's new pay-as-you-go tax plan.

3. All other taxpayers would be required to make quarterly returns, in which they would estimate their annual income for the current year, and pay a quarter of their combined income and victory tax on that amount. For this group the tax deadline would be put back a month, to allow them time to prepare the returns.

Who Would Be in Third Group

Into the third group, it was explained, would fall all types of income not readily subject to withholding collections, including, rent, royalties, fees. It would also cover salary income in the higher surtax brackets not affected by the 20 per cent withholding rate which was geared to collect only the present 6 per cent normal and 13 per cent first bracket surtax.

Cooper announced that the subcommittee had agreed to exempt agricultural laborers, domestic help and members of the armed forces from the withholding tax provision, and that it was assumed they would fall in the third group, making quarterly returns. He added that this question would be settled in drafting the formal legislation.

In the draft of the collection system, there was a strong suggestion that the committee might be leaning more toward the idea of forgiving half a year of tax liability. Such an arrangement would be a compromise between the advocates the bill by Representative Carlson (Republican), of Kansas, calling for a full year's tax abatement, as urged by Beardsley Ruml, New York banker, and the Administration's original contention that as much as possible of 1942 and 1943 taxes should be collected.

Similar to Canadian Plan

A half-year of forgiveness has been suggested by Chairman Doughton, and it also forms the main feature of the new Canadian pay-as-you-go tax plan.

In addition, it was pointed out, the result of the subcommittee plan—without further retouching—would be to wipe out half a year, and collect about 18-months' worth of taxes in 1943.

While agreeing that such was the present legislative status of the pay-as-you-go proposals, members made clear that this should not be taken as indication that a decision had been made so far to collect more than a year's taxes this year.

Cooper conceded that, without further action, the subcommittee plan would result in having taxpayers pay all four installments under the present law, and in addition make the proposed withholding payments and new quarterly returns after July 1. He pointed out, however, this question involved the question of abatement or forgiveness or doubling up, which has been returned to the full committee.

Change of Subject Today

As the subcommittee met, Chairman Doughton ordered a change of subject for the full committee today, with a closed session on a bill to permit shipping tobacco products to members of the armed forces stationed in United States territories, without payment of the domestic excise, in the same way they can now be sent to service men and women in foreign countries.

At present, it was explained, cigarettes can be bought tax-free in this country for shipment to servicemen and women overseas. Frequently the purchaser does not know the address of the one who is to get the cigarettes. If the cigarettes find the soldier in North Africa, or England, everything is all right, but if they reach him in Hawaii, or Alaska, they have to come back for payment of the tax.

Return of cigarettes, in this way, has occasionally startled the sender into thinking something had happened to the one who was to receive them. At the same time, the War Department has expressed concern about having the soldiers' addresses revealed when the cigarettes are returned for the excise levy.

'Postpone Lambing Season,' Is WPB's Advice to Rancher

By the Associated Press

Representative Flannagan (Democrat) of Virginia, a Virginia farmer, reported to the House yesterday what he called the latest suggestion of the WPB "wonder boys."

An Idaho sheep rancher, he said, applied for permission to buy canvas to build lambing pens, and the WPB gave him this answer:

"It is impossible to allow you such a large amount of canvas for the purpose of making lambing sheds. As an alternative, we suggest that you postpone your lambing season until more favorable weather."

Completely dumfounded by this "wise and scintillating decision," Flannagan said, he translated it into verse "to find out if you can get any more sense out of the decision in that form." Even then, Flannagan remarked, it didn't make sense.

For three years, she served as chairman of the Huron Presidential Birthday Ball committee, and has belonged to the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Parent-Teacher Association, and the Ladies Auxiliary of the American Legion.

"You can see I am a joiner," she commented.

The "typical housewife" acknowledged that she was compelled to break up her home temporarily to take the job, but explained that her family members have been "good sports" about it.

Her husband who is business manager of a clinic and hospital in the South Dakota town of 10,000, and her 16-year-old boy, a high school student, are living with friends in Huron, "taking ration books, dog and everything" along, she said. Her 12-year-old daughter was sent to a "very good" girls' school in Sioux Falls, S. D. Her oldest son, 18, has been in the Army at Fort Knox, Ky. since October.

She will help plan radio programs directed to housewives and will participate in some of them.

"Half the women in Huron don't get time to read any newspapers," she said. "We must reach them to get our program over."

She attributed her selection from among a number of candidates to the fact she comes from a food-producing State, combined with her women's group activities, and the fact that she is primarily a bona-fide housewife.

MacArthur Fliers Mop Up Floating Convoy Survivors

Allied Headquarters In Australia (Saturday), March 6 (AP).—Straggler groups of the 15,000 Jap troops spilled into the Bismarck Sea by the sinking of a 22-ship convoy have been searched out bobbing on the ocean in lifeboats and mopped up by Allied planes, the High Command announced today.

"Our long-range fighters and bomber units swept the entire area (of the Huon Gulf) completing mopping up of barges, lifeboats and rafts from sunken ships of the Bismarck Sea convoy," the noon communique of Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported.

"There was scarcely a survivor so far as was known."

At Lae, seizing upon the opportunity presented by the disruption of the Jap plans, MacArthur's planes, for the second straight day, gave that Huon Gulf base a terrific pounding.

"Fires were started which were visible for 40 miles," the communique said. "Weak enemy forces attempted interception but were dispersed by our cover. Three enemy planes were shot down."

New Nazi Plot Charges Loom

However, the Government was free to move at once for a fresh indictment which would conform to the technical requirements of the decision handed down yesterday. There were strong indications that this would be done.

Violations Charged

During the argument this week, when the flaws pointed out by the justice were being discussed, Prosecutor Rogge declared in court that he was convinced there had been a violation of the peacetime sedition law. Rogge remarked, even before the decision, that the Department of Justice might require time to consider whether to send the alleged conspiracy back before the grand jury.

The prosecutor said this more strongly during a recess, when the alleged conspirator, C. Leon De Aryan, walked up to the counsel table and began protesting his Americanism.

"I believe this conspiracy started long ago," Rogge replied, "and I believe it was a vicious, dangerous thing. And I am going to do all that ought to be done to see that the conspirators are punished."

Significantly, the District grand jury that indicted the 34 was extended this week for 30 days more, to "continue investigations begun but not finished."

Since investigation of the alleged conspiracy was not dropped when the indictment was handed in, but has been pressed in several directions, there seemed reason to believe there is material which might be presented to the grand jury if the case is opened up again in that body.

About a dozen defense attorneys, notably John Jackson of Washington and Floyd Lanham of Chicago, made the successful attack on Count 1 of the conspiracy indictment.

This count said the plot began in 1933, and named several overt acts as having been committed until 1938. The law said to have been violated was not passed until 1940.

The Government counsel argued that such a charge was proper, on the theory that the conspiracy began whenever it did begin, and was kept up after the law was passed against it.

Jackson and Lanham and their collegue declared that no trial jury could fail to be prejudiced by averments of a conspiracy of such long standing and insisted that it was wrong for the indictment to go further back than the time the law was passed.

Justice Adkins agreed.

The preliminary hearing will resume March 17, when defense counsel will continue attacks on Count 2, which charges the wartime conspiracy.

Reward Offered In Murder Case

Rewards totaling $500 were posted yesterday for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the person guilty of the murder of Arthur H. Weisenberger, 27-year-old cab driver of Boulevard Heights, Md.

Police Chief Edward J. Kelly authorized $200 of the amount; the Yellow Cab Association, for which the victim drove, posted $100, and members of the man's family put up the other $200. Weisenberger was fatally stabbed January 30 at New Jersey Avenue and D Street Southeast. His body was pulled from his taxi and thrown on a snow-covered vacant lot. He bled to death.

Gossett Quits D. C. Committee

Representative Ed Gossett (Democrat) of Texas, yesterday announced his resignation from the House District Committee. Lack of time to give proper attention to the committee's work prompted the withdrawal, he told the House.

Gossett, who is serving his third term in Congress, told reporters at the time he was named to the committee that he was "shocked" by the appointment. He indicated at that time that he did not desire to serve and would probably resign.

His withdrawal leaves the committee with 11 Democratic members and a total membership of 20

People's Counsel

Harry S. Wender, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, has rendered a public service by calling for prompt appointment of a people's counsel to represent the consumer interests of this voteless community. In an extensive report prepared for Senator Capper, Mr. Wender shows not only that there is a public demand for restoration of this position but also that action in the matter has become urgent. The Federal Government is increasingly bringing pressure to bear upon the District Public Utilities Commission in the decision of utility rate cases. That is the strongest possible argument for an orderly and thorough presentation of local consumers' views in rate cases vitally affecting their interests.

Heretofore it has been assumed by some that a people's counsel is not necessary because the PUC itself is supposed to regulate local utilities in the public interest. That is not, however, a fair or complete statement of the present law. The PUC is a quasi-judicial body. It must hear all the evidence from both the utilities and the public and fix rates that will be fair to both. Without a people's counsel, no one is specifically charged with presentation of the people's case. When Congress set up the present PUC it deliberately provided for a people's counsel so that the PUC would not have to essay the difficult roles of advocate and jury at the same time.

Several years ago the President was said to have left the office of people's counsel vacant on the theory that consumer interests are adequately protected by the PUC. But that theory went by the board when Federal agencies began bringing pressure upon the PUC to lower utility rates. In demanding lower rates to the Government for electricity the Treasury even threatened to seek public ownership of the local power-distributing system. It does not follow that District consumers would benefit from intervention in the case by the powerful Federal Government, which itself consumes more than 25 per cent of the power company's output. The Treasury's primary concern is lower rates for Federal agencies.

What is crystal clear is that this direct intervention by the most powerful of all local consumers makes more urgent the appointment of a people's counsel to represent the rank and file of consumers. Surely the President will not deny to the people as consumers the privilege he claims for the Government as a consumer. In any event, the President has an unmistakable obligation to fill the vacancy. Congress provided that the President "shall" appoint a people's counsel. To leave that post vacant is a violation of law just as failure to appoint Commissioners for the District would be a violation of law. If the President doesn't find time to correct this mistake promptly, Congress will have no reasonable alternative to reestablishment of a people's counsel through appointment by the Commissioners.

Allred Nomination

The public will be relieved to hear from Attorney General Biddle that no deal or political understanding was involved in the nomination of former Judge James V. Allred for the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals. Mr. Biddle clinches his point by saying that on December 8 he asked Monte Lemann of New Orleans to allow his name to be considered for this nomination. Mr. Lemann declined. In February the Attorney General recommended former Judge Allred for the post during a conference with the President.

In suggesting that the former judge be returned to the bench after a political holiday, Mr. Biddle also insists that he chose the best qualified man available for the position. This confidence in Mr. Allred is shared by many other citizens. His record as Governor of Texas and as a Federal judge leaves little room for doubt that he will serve creditably on the Circuit Court of Appeals. So far as we know, the protests against this nomination do not in any way touch upon Mr. Allred's qualifications to be a judge.

When all this has been said, however, the fact remains that Mr. Allred left the bench last year to run against an anti-New Deal candidate and is now elevated to a higher court following his defeat. It is for this reason that his nomination has met with stiff opposition. The courts should not be used as havens for men who shed their judicial robes temporarily to engage in political fights. When Mr. Allred left the bench to run for the Senate he compromised his own future as a judge. To elevate him to a higher court within a few months after his political defeat is to play politics with the courts, regardless of the fact that no deal was made.

The practice of appointing lame ducks to any high office is bad enough. It suggests that the President has no concern for the views of the public. Only yesterday he named former Congressman John M. Houston to the National Labor Relations Board. Certainly that agency ought to have the full confidence of the public. A man who has been repudiated by his constituents may be an actual handicap in such a position. In this critical hour, moreover, any attempt to use either the courts or administrative agencies for political purposes is certain to bring an outcry from the public.

Bombing Washington

The question whether the Germans will feel an obligation to retaliate on Washington and other American cities for the R. A. F.-American raids on Germany has been brought up by threats from Herr Goebbels. Already they have made a feeble gesture against London. It would seem fairly obvious that from a strictly military standpoint the probable result of raids on our cities would be scarcely worth the great difficulties and risks involved. Otherwise there is virtually no explanation of why bombing raids were not attempted by the Nazis in the early winter of 1941-42 when most of our Eastern cities, including Washington, were virtually defenseless. Certainly we are not defenseless today.

There appear to be three ways in which bombing Washington would theoretically be possible. One would be by a few very small planes launched from submarine carriers. The bomb load that could be carried by such planes would be very light indeed, probably consisting of no more than a few incendiaries. Another and on the whole more feasible way would be by planes from swift surface carriers. It is not definitely known that the Germans have such carriers and it seems unlikely that, even if they do have them, the carriers would evade the British and American patrols. The probability that carriers unprotected by convoys would be discovered, intercepted and sunk either by the British or by ourselves would seem rather large.

The third way would be by powerful land-based bombers setting off from some point in France or Norway. The Germans may have bombers capable of this round trip of more than 6000 miles, but again so much fuel would be required for such a journey that the bomb loads would be almost negligible. Moreover, at least half the journey must be made by daylight, and this hazard would increase as the season moves from equinox toward the solstice. For fear of being forced down at sea, these bombers could not venture very far outside a direct linear course.

Three points, then, about the possibility of German air raids on Eastern American seaboard cities seem clear. First, that the raids could scarcely have any military usefulness. Second, that they would be in the nature of "suicide raids" since, without extraordinary good luck, a very slight proportion of the raiders would return to their bases. Third, that since the raids would be solely for "moral effect," the probable targets would be New York or Washington or both. However, the "moral effect" of the recent half-hearted raids on London was just about nil, and there is no reason to suppose the "moral effect" of a "token" raid on New York or Washington would be any greater.

What Women Want

Planning ahead has long been a characteristic pursuit of women. This may have grown out of their housekeeping roles in which the long-range view must constantly be maintained. Hence it is not surprising to find such widespread discussion now among women's organizations of plans for the postwar world. Clubs have their study groups and forums on the subject; articles setting forth the views of women leaders on the problem are appearing frequently in print; the Atlantic Monthly and the National Council of Women are sponsoring an essay contest just closing on "What Postwar World Do Women Want?"

Women, of course, want in general the same type of postwar world men want—one of peace, economic security and liberty of spirit. But they also have many specific goals in which they are especially interested, such as fairer recognition of their sex in business and the professions, better nutrition for families, better physical care and educational opportunities for children, and numerous other things related to social welfare. For concise, concrete expression of what women want after the war, the formula of the British women cannot be beaten. They say they want three things: Better housing, better education for their children, and employment for everyone.

Analyze this aim and you will find it to include most postwar goals. Improved housing is accented particularly in British women's postwar discussions. This is understandable since one in five homes in England has been destroyed or damaged by air raids. Nearly every British woman, it is said, hopes for a house and a garden after the war. That is in the British tradition of home life, but it may also be partly the result of the victory gardening movement. Whether the back-to-the-soil movement in the United States will affect postwar housing here is yet to be seen. Both British and American women are putting much emphasis on complete reemployment after the war. British women are set against a return to the dole, American women against dependency on the WPA.

Naturally any postwar planning depends on the establishment of a durable peace. Most public discussion on this subject by women leaders here has taken a similar line to that expressed by Mme. Chiang Kai-shek in her speeches before the House of Representatives and in Madison Square Garden. China's first lady pleaded for a peace founded not on vengeance or nationalistic aggrandizement, but on "cooperation and mutual respect of nations." But whatever ideas on peace and postwar planning women generally may lean to, they probably will get a chance to make them heard at the peace table. There is a widespread determination on their part to have representation, and that means they will get it. All this preliminary discussion they are carrying on should at least give them something to say when they get the chance.

Oft Remind Us

Offhand we should say that very few men are in less need of artificially engendered personal publicity than Franklin D. Roosevelt. Historical circumstances has made him the most conspicuous personage of his times. The important details of his life are pretty well known; few, if any living men, have received quite as much attention from professional biographers, and Mr. Roosevelt's biographers have included such a popular and widely read author as Emil Ludwig. Thus, if there are any persons left in the world who by now have never heard of Mr. Roosevelt, this must be set down to what the medieval philosophers called "invincible ignorance."

Thus the special biography of Mr. Roosevelt prepared by the Office of War Information, at Government expense, in the form of a glorified comic strip seems, to say the very least, gratuitous. According to Representative Taber of New York, this pamphlet has been "distributed overseas to soldier boys," and if this is the case it certainly seems a flagrant waste not merely of money and paper but of the still more precious space in cargo ships. If there are any American soldiers overseas who were not already acquainted with the main outlines of Mr. Roosevelt's career, one can only wonder why such abnormal ignorance was not discovered in the psychiatric check-up that follows induction.

A few weeks ago, it will be remembered, there was another little tempest in Congress over the illustrated magazine called Victory. This was another product of the Office of War Information, and among the leading articles was a eulogistic biographical sketch of Mr. Roosevelt. Thus The Life of Franklin D. Roosevelt, Thirty-second President of the United States of America, is merely the second instance of build-up to come to light in less than a month, and one may be forgiven for wondering how much more of it there is. It is certainly fair enough to ask Mr. Elmer Davis to explain by what tour de force of definition this kind of thing can be considered "war information."

Seeds And Rations

We print in our letter column today the complaint of a would-be victory gardener who has found himself confronted with an OPA order received by his seed merchant after its issuance on Thursday. This order would make him give up ration points for seeds. He is loath to give up those points on the chance that his garden will be a success. Just what this order is or why it is being issued, is, at this writing, a mystery to the District OPA offices and local ration boards, who have received no official communication about it. It evidently went direct to seed dealers from the OPA in Washington. Seed dealers in this area seem to have been told that the order is to prevent persons from buying up the dried bean and pea seeds for table use instead of for planting. However, some dealers have been advised that special coupons will be issued by the ration boards to the retailer for use in buying wholesale and to individuals who buy the seed for planting. In that case persons will not have to give up points from regular ration books. If this is, indeed, the story, we cannot but applaud the quickness with which OPA is acting to correct an initial blunder, though our inquiries at the OPA have so far yielded no information as to the exact situation.

YOUNG WIFE

She rounded the barn and saw the pink clover
Flooding the pasture and spilling over.
Her breath came fast and she wondered why
She had ever been frightened of billowing sky
That curved wide and long, and the endless span
Of furrowed fields and of failing her man.
Why, this was the same small flower that still grew
In parkways at home, a flower that she knew.

Drinking in gulps of the honey-sweet scent
Till her mind found peace and her fear was spent,
She clung with city-bred hands to the rail
Of the splitlog fence, knowing she wouldn't fail
To be a good wife to a man who raised clover
And her love reached out till her heart tipped over.

Export Control

By Virginia Prewett

To Latin America

THE UNITED STATES and Latin-American nations have taken a long-needed step to meet a major war crisis in setting up a new arrangement for the control of exports from this country to Latin America. The new plan, made public this week by Board of Economic Warfare officials, will correct a situation that has been a cause for deep concern in Latin America ever since the shipping shortage began to be seriously felt.

The new system is a decentralized machinery for approving export licenses for Latin-American republics. What it does in effect is to set up the controls necessary to see to it that every square foot of shipping space that goes southward will be used for supplies they must have for their war effort and their war economies.

Control Begun in 1940

The United States first began to control exports to Latin America in the summer of 1940, when it became apparent that some method had to be devised to keep supplies from this country from going to firms that were part of the Axis trade, propaganda and espionage network below the Rio Grande. In September, 1941, the Office of Export Control became the Office of Exports of the Board of Economic Warfare. After Pearl Harbor this office was given, in addition to the responsibility of preventing our exports from going into the hands of our enemies in Latin America, the duty of making sure that only the allotted amounts of supplies that were short here were exported.

As the system inherited from the prewar set-up worked, the Latin-American importer sent his order to the American manufacturer or exporter's agent, who then put it through our official export-control machinery. Shipping priorities were given to the scarcer and more essential goods, of course. But as merchandise that has been licensed for export piled up on wharves, the scarce, high priority goods would stand ready for shipment side by side with piles of luxury and non-essential merchandise. The high priority merchandise, heavy machinery, steel beams and the like, could not always be fitted into all the available space in a ship. Low priority goods would be put in to complete the loading. For this reason, ships often carried nonessential goods.

The Latin-American importers receiving the luxury goods were naturally pleased enough, but their countrymen who desperately needed essential and critical supplies, and whose orders were backed up in the huge jam accumulated in the United States, could not understand it. If we were so short on shipping space, ran their argument, how was it that luxury and nonessential imports continue to come in?

Under the new plan, which was originally worked out with Brazil and will go into effect in most Latin-American countries soon, each Latin-American government will name an official agency to review orders for goods that its nationals want to import. The Latin-American agency will approve orders for the supplies that they consider most necessary for their country's wartime economy and pass them on to the local American Embassy. Our embassy will recheck to see that no Axis sources are involved and also to see that goods in excess of reasonable needs are not asked for. The country agency, in cooperation with our embassy, will then recommend orders to BEW.

BEW, as claimant agency for Latin-American importers here, will tailor the total of recommended orders to fit actual allocations of supplies and cargo space.

Shipments Will Fill Needs

By this method, it will be assured that when orders for goods from Latin America reach this country they represent real and present essential needs. It is a screening process to stop at the source the purchases of nonessential supplies that have clogged the narrowing channels of southbound trade.

First shipping priorities under the new plan will go to exports that Latin-American countries must have in order to carry out their many contracts to supply us with war materials. We are scouring the area for numerous highly critical raw materials now and it is absolutely imperative that the tools for this production should get to them. Supplies needed to keep going the essential services of the respective governments—and this includes public utilities—have second priority rating. Supplies for civilian enterprises and industries, that are essential even in a stripped-down war economy have third rating.

The supply crisis now facing many Latin-American nations as a result of the shipping shortage is serious. As ships are diverted to maintain life lines to new fronts, and as their stocks are exhausted and their equipment wears out, this problem will grow more pressing. The new highly cooperative plan to assure that southbound space is entirely devoted to vital goods should prove an easing factor. Hopes that it will are high among Latin Americans here. Even if material relief is not as great as some observers expect, the new system will clear up the confusion about the whole shipping and supply situation that has been growing in Latin-American minds.

MacArthur's Victory

By Barnet Nover

The Battle In The Bismarck Sea

THERE HAVE been greater and more important battles in the Pacific War than the one which took place this week in the Bismarck Sea. That engagement does not begin to compare in magnitude with the Battle of the Solomons, which lasted approximately half a year, or, in decisiveness, with the Battle of Midway, one of the great turning points of the war.

Just the same the remarkable victory won by the fliers of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command was the most clear-cut, complete and conclusive triumph our side has won in the Pacific in the 15 months since Pearl Harbor.

SOME TIME ago it was reported from Allied headquarters in the Southwest Pacific that a Japanese striking force of formidable dimensions was being assembled in the waters off New Britain. In Australia this news produced a wave of alarm. It was interpreted as foreshadowing a Japanese attempt to invade that continent.

The chances are, however, that Australia was not the enemy's immediate objective, that what the Japanese were aiming to do was to reinforce their harassed garrisons at Lae and Salamaua in New Guinea. Certainly it would be foolhardy for the Japanese to take the great risks involved in an invasion of Australia as long as the invasion route was flanked east and west by such Allied-held points as Guadalcanal and Papua.

It is a fair assumption, therefore, that the purpose which the Japanese hoped to carry out by means of the task force being assembled off New Britain was defensive rather than offensive in nature.

IT IS TRUE that the Japanese can never feel wholly secure in what they call their "Coprosperity Sphere" so long as it is boxed round, north, south, east and west by Allied bastions.

But the existence of these bastions is something which Japan must now accept as a more or less unalterable fact. Even when she was at the peak of her strength and the Allies were at the nadir of theirs, Japan was unable to drive the Allies out of those bastions—the Aleutians, Pearl Harbor and Midway, New Caledonia and the New Hebrides, New Zealand, Port Moresby and Australia, Ceylon and India and Unoccupied China. And Japan's hope of ever doing so has been diminishing with each passing day.

No wonder then, that since the loss of Guadalcanal and Papua, Japan's strategy has shifted from the offensive to the defensive. No longer strong enough to strike out in new directions, the Japanese have been concentrating on building up in the Southwest Pacific a wall of defenses capable of keeping out the Allies.

This policy, if successful, would give Japan time to exploit her vast gains and also time to concentrate on knocking out China. But such strategy can only succeed if the Mikado's forces can retain possession of the western Solomons and of northern New Guinea. The loss of those regions would immediately imperil Rabaul and leave the way open for an Allied thrust in the direction of Japan's major bases in the Caroline and Marianas Islands

IT WAS in line with this new strategy that Japan sought to reinforce her garrisons at Lae and Salamaua, since the loss of those points would mean the loss of New Guinea. This move has now come a cropper.

All 12 transports in the convoy headed for Lae, all 10 of the escort vessels (cruisers or destroyers) were sent to the bottom by Allied fliers—American, Australian, British and Dutch. An estimated 15,000 Japanese soldiers were drowned. And altogether 82 Japanese planes were destroyed or damaged.

Allied losses, on the other hand, amounted to one bomber and three fighters shot down. A number of other Allied planes were damaged but returned to base. It was thus no exaggeration for General MacArthur to say, as he did in his communique, that:

"We have achieved a victory of such completeness as to assume the proportions of a major disaster to the enemy. His entire force was practically destroyed."

IT TAKES TIME to assemble such a force as that which the Japanese lost in the Bismarck Sea. So unless the Japanese garrisons at Lae and Salamaua can unaided manage to hold out indefinitely despite rapidly mounting odds against them, the first consequence of the Japanese defeat in the Bismarck Sea may very well be the loss of Northern New Guinea, which means ultimately the loss of Rabaul.

But the tactical significance of that battle between American air power and Japanese sea power is even greater than its strategic importance. To General Kenny, the commander of the Allied air force in the Southwestern Pacific and to General MacArthur, his commander in chief, must go the credit for a superb job of organization. The execution of the assigned task was no less brilliant. The results were magnificent and will be felt throughout the Pacific theater. The sun of Nippon is sinking.

Seeds And Rations

Looking to the security of my family and in compliance with the Government-sponsored program of Victory Gardens, I have within the last week secured a garden plot of considerable size. In addition I have purchased tools, a plow and fertilizer, all at considerable expense.

I ordered my seeds from a local merchant Wednesday, March 3, and when I called for them today, Friday, March 5, I was informed that I would have to forfeit 112 points out of my ration book for the 12 pounds of seed beans and two pounds of seed peas, in accordance with an OPA order received Thursday, March 4.

Now 112 points are a considerable number to give up considering the size of my family of six, and the question in my mind is whether to sacrifice them and gamble on having a successful crop. I am not a farmer and my experience in gardening is nil. Even an experienced gardener runs a chance with the elements and sometimes does not get back his seed.

Further, the Government asks us not to eat the products which we may be so lucky to raise, but to can all of it in order to relieve the market next winter. Yet, they ask me to sacrifice 112 food points in order to get seed which may not mature. What, pray tell, are we to eat next winter in such an event.

At this moment the matter is a maze of confusion to me and another example of blundering on the part of this Government Administration. HENRY A. LATIMER.

Answer Questions

Do you answer soldiers' questions when they write them home? I mean questions that are not the censor type. A serviceman told me yesterday he had written 201 questions home asking about everything from the neighbor's activities to the family dog and garden. "And don't you know Mother forgets to answer half of them," he said with a sigh. I know just how that boy feels. I'm a Government girl more than a thousand miles from home and when my sister-in-law just answers a "yes" or a "no" to what is probably a very little, insignificant, humorous inquiry to her, I am doubly enjoyed and my morale is lifted. Puerto Rican Problems

There are many problems in Puerto Rico. There is a problem in economy. Beet sugar barons from a certain region in the United States don't want the island to be such a potent competitor in sugar. These beet interests never allow their representatives in Washington to favor Puerto Rico in any way. They never favor Statehood for Puerto Rico. They search for arguments against it.

Enemy number two of Puerto Rico is the money interests who have gone to the island to produce sugar and control the vital interests of that place. Whilst they draw benefits they have controlled all the land, underpaid the laborer, and forced the land tenants to crowd into unhealthy places whilst doing everything in their power to keep always the island in the status of a colony and dejected submission. Every time the United States Government wishes to grant equal rights to the citizens of the island, the worst arguments are brought against them, ignoring that human faults can be found everywhere and that if the Puerto Rican has not advanced more in all respects it is because money interests have tied a cord at their neck.

We all hope that the present committee studying conditions in Puerto Rico will overcome all petty arguments in doing justice to the island.

The fact that Puerto Ricans use Spanish language is nothing to wonder at. I have been in the land of Senator Chavez and was pleasantly surprised to hear New Mexicans praying in Spanish, passing their laws in Spanish and mixing both languages with a freedom that in no way interferes with their patriotism and advancement. All American citizens are proud of New Mexicans and their historical customs. ARMANDO ANGULO.

Spanish Situation

This is to commend your significant editorial, "Spanish Paradox," appearing in The Post on March 1. It is especially interesting to a former pupil of Prof. Carlton Hayes when at Columbia University, who is now Ambassador to Madrid, and to whom you refer. My comment is that everyone wishing to understand the Spanish situation fully should read what Drew Pearson has been writing in recent weeks about this subject in "The Washington Merry-Go-Round" appearing in The Post. Cleveland Visit And Story

In behalf of Mayor Frank Lausche of Cleveland, Director William Stinchcomb of civilian defense and myself, I wish to express our deep appreciation for the visit made to Cleveland by Mrs. Agnes Meyer, representative of The Washington Post, as a part of her country-wide tour in a study of leading war industry cities.

Mrs. Meyer's visit to Cleveland gave us an opportunity to bring together a number of key individuals and groups from industry, labor, social work and civic organizations for a discussion on how England is handling her urban war problems and how at the same time we can improve our own programs in this respect.

We feel strongly that quite apart from the very excellent article which Mrs. Meyer wrote on her Cleveland visit, that her trip was most worth while in giving us a broader point of view and in encouraging local initiative on the home front. We want to thank The Washington Post for making it possible for Mrs. Meyer to come and believe that The Post is fulfilling a very important function in arranging this country-wide tour.

Federal Pay

That 60 per cent of Federal employes already receive payment for overtime on a real one and one-half time basis, that many necessary persons cannot be obtained because of this difference between various groups of Federal employes and that low pay is still one of the causes for the huge turnover among Government workers all show the need for the passage of the Mead bill.

Further, the fact that workers in private industry receive time and a half pay put Federal workers in a discriminated against position. Surely there is no logic in this position.

How can one justify the statement that granting 40 per cent of Federal employes real time and a half would cause inflation, as your editorial stated. Let us not add economic inequality to the political inequality existing for Washington Government employes.

The Once Over

The Village Grocer

(After Longfellow)

Under a spreading web of rules
The village grocer stands;
His brow is all tied up in knots
His head is in his hands
And there hardly is, from day to day,
A rule he understands!

II

His hair is thin and getting worse,
His face is grey or blue
His brow is wet with honest sweat;
His set-up is so new!
His customers are dizzy but
The grocer's dizzy, too.

III

Day in, day out from morn till night,
You can hear the loud disputes
As the women battle for sourkraut,
Waxed beans and processed fruits—
And the grocer's lot is some loud Bronx cheers
Plus some most discordant hoots.

IV

And children coming home from school
Look in at the open door;
They love to see how their elders act
In a rationed grocery store
When both sides figure their total points
And dispute the final score.

V

He goes on Sunday to the church
And sees the people meek—
And marvels that they are the ones
Who fought with him all week;
And he's glad there are no value cards
When the parson starts to speak.

VI

Toiling, computing, sorrowing
Onward through life he goes;
Each morning sees the OPA
With new rules to disclose;
Each evening sees him totter home
Just a wreck from head to toes.

VII

His business isn't what it was;
And he knows that he is through
With the days he knew what he could sell—
And knew all the prices, too!
(And when "charts" were things that a sailor used
When he sailed the ocean blue.)

VIII

Thanks, thanks to thee, my grocer friend,
For the lessons that you teach!
Into all lives some raindrops fall
With a point value for each . . .
(I'll take a can of that apple juice—
And how many points for peach?)

"OPA Urges Public to Be Patient With New Ration Charts."—Headline.

At what point should patience be frozen, boys?

Marketing Song

To market, to market
By point card to shop . . .
Home so exhausted
I just wanna drop.

Arrows and figures
And type big and small,
Rules and notations
All over the wall.

Arguments, errors,
Confusion and aches;
My, but a shopper
Must have what it takes!

"Give me 48 points and you can have my store," moaned our exasperated delicatessen man today.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

On A Cold And Windy Pier

IT IS no exaggeration, I think, to say that the American people have almost no conception of what Americans are accomplishing in this war. Perhaps the thing is too big to be seen as a whole, too complicated to be described in words, and in many ways too difficult for any one man to understand. I know that on those few occasions when I get away from Washington long enough to see some of the things which are actually being done, instead of studying statistics and statements about them, I come back feeling that somehow the Nation does not realize, each of us seeing only a little aspect of it all, what this Nation is doing.

LIPPMANN

The reason may in part be that the censorship is too rigid, in part that the security regulations are too wooden, in very great part, I imagine that most of us who write for the newspapers are too busy writing for the newspapers to go and look at what we write about. I am sure that few men in Congress have any clear or even remotely adequate idea of the scale and of the intricacy of the national effort, of the forethought and painstaking work that makes things move, of the research and invention and organization by countless unadvertised men. All we see and all that most of us know about have been something of the final results, our defeats when we were unprepared and inexperienced, our more spectacular successes—and accompanying them the drama of Washington personalities.

ABOUT THIS drama a perspicacious lady, who knows Washington well, sends me a sentence from a book of D. H. Lawrence's in which he wrote of one of his characters: "Poor Richard Lovatt wearied himself to death struggling with the problem of himself, and calling it Australia." For Washington is full of men whose anxieties are reported as the inner inside dope about the war, men struggling with the problem of themselves, and calling it America.

I am rather full of this at the moment because recently I stood at the foot of a gangplank and watched American soldiers embarking on a transport. This was at the end of a day in which I had seen the unbelievably complicated organization and the immense installation by which these men got to the ship and by which their weapons and their supplies are, like a stupendous jigsaw puzzle, brought together and made to fit. It was not the battle front. It was not the training camps. It was not the war production factories. It was just the neck of the bottle through which all the things we read and talk about have to pass: the draft, the training, the officer's schools, the invention, the design, the procurement, the production, the transportation of the infinitely varied gear of modern war.

I had heard discussions about how this neck of the bottle is managed. But though I had seen it in the other war, and had myself passed through it, I had no idea of what this one, out of so many undertakings of all sorts, was really like. It would take a much more gifted reporter than I am to describe it. What I can report about it is that it has never been reported; when I arrived, I was greeted by the officers in charge as if I had made my way to an outpost in the Aleutians or to some Guadalcanal where no one had seen or even expected to see a civilian who was interested in them.

I DO NOT know what all the reasons are or who, if anyone, is to blame, but the fact of the matter is that the Nation has a right to know, and what is more the Nation owes it to its men and to itself to know, much more than it does about this prodigious and epochmaking national effort. It is all very well to talk about a people's war. But this unnatural and absurd separation between the civilians and the men who are carrying the burden of the Nation should be broken down. For there is only one form of payment which can be made to the men who go off into loneliness and into danger, or to the men who work without glory and do the hard, the menial, the thankless work which is needed to sustain the fighting men. That payment is to know that the people know and are interested, and that they are never forgotten and their devotion taken for granted.

The ribbons, the medals, the little items in the newspaper are all very well. But they are for the few, and even for them they come at the spectacular end and not in the difficult beginning when the hard work has to be done, and the loneliness conquered, and the perils are still ahead. This is the time when the sustaining force of the affection and the faith of the people from whom these soldiers came is so necessary. But how can it be exerted when the great American Army lives and moves behind a curtain which separates it from the people?

I THINK I know the need for secrecy, and something of the nature of espionage, and of how imperative it is to combat it, especially for an army which must move across the oceans infested by enemy submarines. But I do not believe that the War Department is using its imagination in this matter.

The men who were being embarked were arriving at the pier in a succession of small boats. It was broad daylight, and anyone in any one of a hundred buildings on shore could see the small boats, the men crowded on them, and the transport to which they were going. Moreover, on the pier itself and on the ship there were hundreds of civilian laborers.

Yet on the long, damp, cold and windy pier, where the men were lined up before they went aboard ship, there was not one single thing done to relieve the bleakness of what to all of them is probably the beginning of the greatest adventure of their lives, and to most of them surely a very trying moment. There was no band. There was no singing. There was no flag. There was no woman from the Red Cross to give them a cup of coffee and a doughnut. There was no one to cheer them on, no one who in any way represented the people to send them off feeling they were leaving their own people, not merely an iron and concrete pier on a wintery and windy day.

THESE ARE not small things. These are great things in war. For even in mechanized war, the souls of men are not mechanized, and just cold efficiency, no matter how efficient in itself, is not enough.

YOUR FEDERAL INCOME TAX
No. 52
Checking Delinquents

The Bureau of Internal Revenue has at its command many sources for checking up delinquent taxpayers. One of these is the "information at source" provision of the Internal Revenue Code, under which persons, "in whatever capacity acting," are required to report on Form 1099, to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington, D. C., payments of fixed or determinable income to another in the calendar year of 1942 of $500 or more. If the recipient is married, and is a citizen or resident of the United States, reports need not be made of salary or other compensation for personal services unless the payments aggregate $1200 or more. If the marital status of the payee is unknown to the payor, the payee is considered a single person for the purpose of filing an information return of salary or other compensation for personal services.

Fixed or determinable income includes wages, salaries, royalties, premiums, rent, interest, etc. A separate return of information for each employe is required of employers. The requirements are not limited to periodical payments, but a single payment must be reported. Domestic and resident foreign corporations are required to make a separate report, Form 1099, of dividends or distributions for each individual, citizen, or resident of the United States, resident fiduciary, or a resident partnership any member of which is a citizen or resident, who was paid $100 or more during the calendar year 1942.

Farm Price Clash Near

OPA Seeks Controls

The Office of Price Administration and the Department of Agriculture are headed for a showdown on the question of imposing price controls on livestock and other foods at the farmer level, informed Government officials stated yesterday.

The Office of Price Administration is said to believe that complete price control "from out of the ground up" is necessary to enfore price ceilings and stamp out "black markets."

Department of Agriculture officials have generally opposed ceilings on livestock and other controls on the farmer's produce to avoid placing any unnecessary controls on the producers.

OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown, in discussing the specific dollars and cents ceilings imposed on pork products, said that he planned to give a trial to these ceilings before pressing for ceilings on live hogs. However, informed officials state that a "squeeze" on these ceilings under existing marketing conditions is almost inevitable.

Beef Price Ceilings Coming

Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard has a veto over any farm ceilings proposed by Brown, but the OPA chief would have an appeal to Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes.

Meanwhile, it was learned that specific dollars and cents ceilings would be imposed on various cuts of beef within the near future. Specific prices are also being prepared for lamb, other meat products and poultry, but it is not expected that more than the beef and pork ceilings would be able to go into effect at the start of meat rationing, now scheduled for the end of this month.

It was also learned that extensive plans to broaden the meat rations are already under way. Originally slated to include only beef, lamb and pork at the start, it is now scheduled to include cheese as well, in addition to butter and cooking fats and oils. At a later date, it is hoped to add poultry and eggs.

All will be grouped together under a point system rationing, using the red stamps in the point ration book.

Increase Pork Prices 2.2%

The specific ceilings on pork products which were announced Thursday to go into effect April 1 boost present pork prices about 2.2 per cent, as judged by the Bureau of Labor Statistics general pork index. However, OPA officials emphasize that consumers will be saved many millions of dollars by resultant curtailing of black market practices.

With specific dollars and cents ceilings imposed, cuts of meat are rigidly defined—in effect a type of grade labeling for types of meat. Housewives will thus be able to protect themselves against evasion of ceilings as a result of improper grading of meat under existing ceilings—one of the commonest black market abuses.

The beef ceiling regulation is expected to feature an inexpensive hamburger meat, running around 30 cents a pound, with ingredients rigidly defined. Housewives wanting different types of hamburgers will be expected to buy the meat whole and watch the butcher grind it before their eyes.

The pork ceilings represent a fairly heavy cut back in prices for the average small independent store which has been selling meat at unusually high prices, but represent an increase in the price which chain stores may charge.

Chains Will Benefit

This relationship will permit the chains to stock meat once again, will bring them back into a more normal relation with independent stores, and will provide the consumer more selectivity in meat buying.

OPA recognizes that its meat ceilings, which divide the country into a number of marketing zones, may operate unfairly in some local areas. Plans are now being drawn to extend authority to change meat ceilings to local OPA offices, in special cases. Such authority was delegated to the San Francisco OPA yesterday.

In discussing the question of placing ceilings on live animals at a recent press conference, Brown stated that he did not plan to look into the question of price ceilings on cattle until he had examined the question of ceilings on live hogs. A ceiling on live hogs is regarded as much simpler to impose, particularly since the country's hog producers are not opposed violently to the ceilings. Cattlemen, however, have voiced vigorous objection to ceilings on live cattle.

Probably one of the most complicated problems in this connection involves poultry. Since chickens and eggs are produced near many large cities and are relatively easy to market, price control on poultry and poultry products probably would present a terrific black market problem. Because of this problem, poultry will not be included in the meat ration at the outset.

Metal in C. & O. Canal Locks to Be Salvaged

Metal used in the locks of the old Chesapeake & Ohio canal, once a thriving transportation line between Washington and Cumberland, Md., will be scrapped for the salvage campaign, it was announced yesterday by the Maryland State Salvage Committee.

Fifty-one wrought-iron reinforced locks between Seneca, Md., and Cumberland will be torn down and burned to reclaim the metal, the announcement said.

Reds Get U. S. Supplies

Nazis Unable to Stop Flow

(One of a Series.)

By Henry C. Cassidy

Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 5.—The United States, despite all Adolf Hitler can do to stop it, is definitely delivering the goods to the Soviet Union.

After riding in American tanks, trucks and jeeps, seeing American bombers and fighters, eating American sugar and lard, in remote corners of Russia, one cannot doubt that a large part of the supplies we promised the Red Army is reaching its destination.

I cannot cite figures. The only ones made known in Moscow are those announced from Washington or London. But I can tell you the impression of one who has been in Russia throughout the war.

It is that the answer to the questions—are American goods reaching the Soviet Union? Are the Russians satisfied with our supplies?—is, in each case, yes.

Hitler, early in the war, boasted that the United Nations' only supply lines to the Soviet Union were across the Arctic or along the Equator. Since then, he has certainly been surprised by the way those very lines have been made effective.

U. S. Vehicles Are Common

Our most conspicuous contribution to the Soviet war effort is in vehicles. On the main streets of Moscow, on the roads of provincial town, on the dirt tracks of the countryside, American trucks are a common sight. Jeeps scuttle everywhere, from the paved highways of the rear to the rough fields of the front.

A year ago they were rare sights, which caused onlookers to stop and admire them. Now they are no longer a novelty.

The trucks are used for road transport, on which the Red army depends largely for its supplies. The jeeps are used as staff cars, to carry officers on their missions. Both have been employed extensively in the Russian winter offensive.

It would be idle to deny that there has been any trouble with the vehicles. Some trucks have broken axles on trackless terrain, boiled over in summer, frozen up in winter; some jeep motors have become clogged with mud. But generally, men who drive the machines have told me, their performance has been splendid.

The Russians, moreover, whatever their reputation may be abroad, are good, resourceful mechanics. Machines come in for rough treatment in that rigorous climate. But with a minimum of tools and spare parts, the drivers keep them running.

Car Runs at 40 Below

For example, Pavel Ivanovich Diakov, an average Russian chauffeur, who drives a light American sedan for the Associated Press, had to park his car out of doors in Kuibyshev all last winter, in 42-below-zero temperatures, and several feet of snow. But each morning, when the telegrams were ready to go, so was the car.

American tanks are less noticeable to the Russian people, since they are assembled deep in the rear and sent directly to the front. I have visited an assembly point, however, and seen hundreds of medium and light tanks, ready to go into action.

The first M-3 models, with a riveted frame and fixed cannon, proved less effective than the welded types and mobile turret, but since then, more modern machines have been delivered.

The Russians still prefer their heavy KV, medium T-34 and light T-60 tanks for major combat. They used these principally in their southern offensives this winter, but American tanks, as well as the British Mathildas and Valentines, are doing service on other fronts.

American fighters, the Tomahawk, Kittyhawk and Airacobra, are defending some of the most important points of the Soviet Union, including Moscow, Leningrad and Murmansk. Crack pilots, many of them wearers of the highest decoration, Hero of the Soviet Union, are flying them. Unanimously, they like them.

Moscow Not Raided

All these, too, I have seen at airports outside Moscow. They have had little to do there recently, for the Germans have not raided the capital since last April 5. That, in itself, is a strong recommendation of their efficiency.

American attack bombers have not been on public display, but they are reliably reported to have been used effectively during the defense of Stalingrad and the Red Army counteroffensive.

It may be a prod to American pride to note that the Russians believe they have fighters, as well as tanks, superior to anything we have delivered to the Soviet Union. A foreign pilot, who has flown American, British and Soviet planes and who is now fighting on the Russian front, told me he agreed the Red air force Yak was better than anything else he had handled.

In addition to the principal equipment, I have come across numerous other items of American supplies: Field telephones with a Cossack unit, woolen blankets in a military hospital, granulated sugar in a Red army mess, lard on the shelves of a Moscow store, all of it being given good use.

People Are Grateful

Since my return to New York, I have heard some comment that the Russians do not seem to realize or appreciate the extent of our effort to aid them.

They do realize it, for every statement President Roosevelt or Prime Minister Churchill has made on this subject, complete with figures, has been reproduced in the Soviet press, and the Russians are avid newspaper readers. Those with whom I have come into contact have also made clear that they appreciate it.

The man behind American supplies to the Soviet Union is Brig. Gen. Philip R. Faymonville, former military attache and present lend-lease representative in Moscow. He speaks Russian fluently and is on friendly terms with the Soviet authorities, from Foreign Trade Commissar Anastas Mikoyan, with whom he deals, on down.

If he has one main problem, it is to give the Russians more of the same.

Guffey Backs Roosevelt For 4th Term

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Everybody knows that "unless the war is won in 1944, President Roosevelt will again be drafted and chosen to lead our country," Senator Guffey (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, yesterday told the Senate in urging a fourth term draft movement for the Chief Executive.

"There is no American tradition which says that a good President cannot serve four terms in the White House," said the chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee.

Guffey made a similar speech in the Senate long before the 1940 Democratic National Convention in Chicago, in which he launched a precedent-breaking third term draft movement for Mr. Roosevelt.

It followed the statement on Wednesday by Chairman Frank Walker of the Democratic National Committee, after a White House conference, that some members of the national committee urged the President to seek a fourth term if the war is not ended by the summer of 1944. Walker then said he did not expect the war to be over by that time.

Immediately following Guffey's speech, Democratic Leader Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky submitted for the Congressional Record a lengthy statement on the achievements of President Roosevelt during his 10 years in the White House, ended Thursday.

Guffey said the opposition to President Roosevelt is "desperate," for it knows "there is no American tradition which says that a good President cannot serve four terms in the White House."

Guffey said there was no "American tradition which says that a bad President is entitled to two terms in the White House."

"We judge our Presidents by what they do and what they are, keep them and get rid of them to suit ourselves, not to suit the convenience of party ambition or politics as usual," he added.

"Today, ten years after Roosevelt's first inaugural, there are countless Americans, rich and poor, of every race, creed and color, bankers included, who say, 'thank God for Roosevelt.'"

Slaughtering Goes Under Control April 1

By the Associated Press

Strict controls over the slaughter of livestock and sale of meat, designed to stamp out black market operations, will go into effect April 1.

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, announcing them yesterday, said he did not regard the controls as a "cure-all for the defects in the present meat situation," but part of a broad program which includes consumer rationing and uniform retail price ceilings.

Wickard followed up this announcement with a radio appeal last night to the American people to join in the Government's program "to help straighten out the meat situation."

Declaring meat supplies have been "very poorly distributed," the Secretary said in an address prepared for broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System that "unless we straighten this situation out, it will seriously interfere with the entire war effort."

"The meat program has two big objectives," Wickard said. "First, we aim to stamp out the black market in meat. Second, we aim to divide the civilian supply fairly among our people."

Cattle and hogs should sell for good prices under the price ceilings, he continued, but "not at the Chicago prices of yesterday." He said hogs sold at $16, "the highest price since 1920, and choice steers sold for the highest March price in 24 years."

"These extremely high prices testify to the existence of black markets," he said. "If OPA can enforce its price ceilings and we control slaughterers as we should, prices for livestock, in my opinion, will not get out of hand."

In his address, Wickard explained details of the orders he announced earlier in the day.

One order requires all livestock slaughterers who sell meat, including farmers and local butchers, to operate under a permit system. As an aid to enforcement, each wholesale cut of meat must be stamped at least once with the permit number.

Livestock dealers also must obtain permits to buy and sell livestocks and keep complete records of their transactions. While farmers need not obtain permits, they were asked to keep records of their purchases and sales.

Wickard said his orders were aimed at "two main types of lawbreakers engaged in the black marketing of meats—the racketeer slaughterer who ignores the Government's regulations on the quantity of meat he may sell and the chiseling operator who sells meat for prices higher than those permitted by OPA ceilings."

In addition to operating under permits, Wickard directed that all slaughterers operating under Federal inspection set aside a specified percentage of their production for direct war needs.

House Passes Supplementary 4 Billion Navy Bill

The House pased 344 to 0 and sent to the Senate yesterday a $3,816,206,583 appropriation bill for the Navy to supplement $19,798,431,662 previously made available to the naval service for the fiscal year ending June 30. In addition to the cash appropriations, the bill carried additional contract authorization of 210 million dollars.

The bulk of the new funds are for ordnance, maintenance and construction work for a Navy with a projected strength of 2¼ million men and women by mid-1944.

Farm Loans To Aid Yield

Billion Proposed

Large and rapid increases of food production could be obtained in this country by the investment of one billion dollars with 1,390,000 farmers now producing at less than capacity, the National Farmers Union said yesterday in a plan submitted to the Economic Stabilization Board.

Under war contracts similar to those granted industry, James G. Patton, president of the union, declared these farmers could be supplied with the extra credit and supplies needed—and run up a 10 per cent increase in food supplies this year.

He declared that only two million farms of the country have a real labor shortage, and that four million others have a sufficient worker supply or an underemployment of labor. "This is due to lack of land, credit, equipment and modern management practices," he said.

FSA Results Cited

Figures from the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Patton asserted, show 1,390,000 of the 4 million would respond quickly to assistance such as that extended by the Farm Security Administration to approximately 463,000 borrowers "with splendid production results."

The total program asked by his organization, he said, would require a tripling of FSA operations and could not get into effect in time to produce full results this season.

"The important thing to remember," he declared, "is that, without help, the big majority of these farms will make no increase in production, but will constitute drains on the food supply produced by other farmers. They must be given management assistance as well as credit to build up their capital. Not only the experience of FSA, but the independent judgments of qualified economists have verified this fact."

Other Recommendations

In addition to proposing the huge loan system, Patton recommended a better utilization of farm machinery, a farm labor program that would make full use of youth and women, the use of Canadian wheat to encourage more feeding for livestock, more leeway to farmers in deciding what crops they can grow best, maintenance of present prices guaranteed to farmers, a consolidation of Federal farm agencies at local levels, and a rationalization of food processing and distribution.

Patton said cotton producers should be subsidized to encourage a more rapid shift to the production of livestock, oil crops, and livestock feeds. Individual prices should be adjusted under present levels, he said, and incentive payments should be used to increase production, especially of milk.

Patton charged that until recently anyone who talked to some agencies about the food problem—especially if he talked to WPB—was considered an "imposter" who had no interest in the war.

"Not until the farmer was going down the third time," he said, "did anybody consider him a part of the war machine."

Princeton, N. J., March 5.—Even with the big cuts in fuel oil allowance under rationing, the majority of home owners with oil furnaces are keeping their homes heated above the temperature recommended by the Government.

This would indicate that, if war demands make it necessary, oil allowances in some areas could be reduced still further without seriously impairing health.

Of all oil furnace owners interviewed by the Institute in recent weeks throughout the 30 States with fuel oil rationing, 56 per cent say they are keeping occupied rooms in their houses above the 65-degree daytime temperature recommended by the Government.

One-third Above 70 Degrees

Slightly more than one-third are actually keeping the temperature at 70 degrees or above.

However, the Government's campaign for lower temperatures has made headway since the earlier part of the winter. More homes are now heated at 65 degrees or less than was the case in December. But there is still much more room for progress, particularly in States where the amount of oil allowed per ration coupon has not been cut.

HOMES HEATED BY OIL IN RATIONED STATES (65 degrees recommended)
Under 65 degrees at present	11%
At 65 degrees	33
At 68 degrees	19

It will be noted that the total number above 65 degrees is 56 per cent.

A study made in those same States in early December by the Institute showed that 66 per cent were keeping their temperatures above 65 degrees, as compared with 56 per cent today. In other words, there has been a marked improvement in compliance with the Government's wishes.

Rationing Approved

The general reaction of oil furnace owners toward the rationing program is favorable. More than two-thirds think the rationing has been handled fairly, as the following survey question reveals:

"Do you think the rationing of fuel oil has been handled fairly in your area?"

The vote among oil furnace owners in the 30 rationed States is—

Yes	68%
No	23
No opinion	9

Among the 23 per cent not satisfied, the chief complaint is not so much against the amount of fuel allowed as against alleged inefficiency among ration boards and inequality or favoritism in the apportionment of oil.

Biddle Once Opposed Allred Appointment, Overton Says

By Robert De Vore

Post Staff Writer

Senator Overton (Democrat) of Louisiana, yesterday challenged before a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee the accuracy of the memory of Attorney General Biddle on what the Senator called the "political aspects" of the appointment of former Gov. James V. Allred of Texas, to a Federal Appeals Court bench.

Overton took pains on two occasions to tell the subcommittee, politely but firmly, it was his recollection that Biddle last January informed him and Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana, that he would oppose appointment of Allred because of its "political aspects." Biddle said: "I am perfectly certain I didn't make such a statement."

After Allred's nomination went to the Senate for confirmation recently, the entire Louisiana delegation assailed it as a New Deal "political payoff" and vigorously complained the selection would give Texas two places on the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals to none for Louisiana.

Biddle asserted Allred's appointment was based solely "upon his ability, judicial reputation and character." He declared as "absolutely" without foundation "the rumor" that the nomination was to repay Allred for trying last year, without success, to unseat Anti-New Deal Senator O'Daniel (Democrat) of Texas.

Allred, who resigned as Federal district judge to make the race against O'Daniel, insisted upon being sworn in as a witness, a procedure that would make him liable for a perjury charge if he failed to tell the truth. He declared:

"I want this committee to know that I had no agreement, direct or indirect, with the President or any person claiming to represent the President, that I should be appointed to another judgeship.

"I never had any request from the President, directly or indirectly, to enter the Senate race, and during the campaign I had no encouragement from him or his representatives."

Allred began his defense with these words:

"If you find anything in my public or private life reflecting on my ability or character to fill this position, I think you should recommend against my confirmation. If not, I hope you will recommend that I be approved."

The subcommittee, headed by Senator Hatch (Democrat) of Wyoming, had expected to vote yesterday on whether to recommend Allred for confirmation to the full Judiciary Committee, which must pass upon the appointment before it goes to the Senate. Action was postponed at the request of Senator Overton who asked that the hearings be kept open until Senator Ellender (Democrat) of Louisiana, who is ill, had an opportunity to make a statement.

Allred swore he has not seen President Roosevelt since September, 1938. Not until after the election did he tell "the President's son" (Lieut. Col. Elliott Roosevelt) that he "would like to have" a vacancy on the Court of Appeals.

"If you are returned to the bench will you use it as a stop-gap or stepping stone to another political campaign?" asked Senator Ferguson (Republican) of Michigan.

"I wil not . . . I want to be a Federal judge," he asserted.

Overton asked the nominee if he thought it "compatible with the best interests of the judiciary" for him to have left the "active political life" of Governor to go on the Federal bench, to have quit the bench to reenter politics and to seek to return to the bench after his defeat.

"I see no objectionable feature to it," was the reply. "That is a matter for the committee and the Senate to decide."

During his denial of Overton's assertion that he promised him and Ellender he would recommend their candidate, Judge Archie T. Higgins of New Orleans, for the Circuit Court post, Biddle disclosed that he had asked another Louisiana resident to take the position.

"I do not believe that I am betraying any confidences when I tell you that I telephoned Mr. Monte Lemann of New Orleans, one of the foremost attorneys of the State and the Nation, to ask him if he would consider the appointment. I regret to say that he refused to allow me to consider his name," Biddle said.

G. W. Gains Final Round With Duke

Overtime Needed To Survive Bitter Southern Conference Game; Citadel Out

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

Raleigh, N. C., March 5.—George Washington University's basketball team, five points behind with a minute and 50 seconds to play, staged a spurt you had to see to believe here tonight and finally beat Davidson College, 47 to 40, in a heart-testing semi-final of the Southern Conference basketball championship.

The Colonials finally won in overtime, completely dominating the extra session after Davidson's Tommy Peters, the outstanding star of this and many preceeding conference championships was on the bench with four personal fouls.

Thus the Colonials, almost hopelessly beaten in the fading moments with the crowd of 4100 cheering madly for the Wildcats, reversed their showing of last year when they lost the same type ball game to William and Mary. Now it's Duke and G. W. for the twenty-second annual title tomorrow night.

Duke Whips Citadel

Duke's defending champions earned a final round berth for the third consecutive year by walloping an outmanned Citadel club, 56 to 37, with Duke reserves playing the last 15 minutes after the regulars left with a 46-to-23 margin.

Once again it was Johnny Shumate, former Bethesda High courtman of Citadel, who won the crowd's approval with an 18 point performance. The Washington (D. C.) youngster kept the Light Brigade in the ball for a time in the first half as they held to an 18-to-17 lead, but Duke forged ahead 32 to 21 at the half and won going away with Gordon Carver's 19 points best of the night.

Long Shots Count

Peters took part in an uncanny long shot session of the Wildcats when they made five shots out of seven from the absolute middle of the court and put G. W. behind, 27-20, at a time in the second half when it looked as though George Washington was really going to sleep here. Tommy's brother, George, dropped in three of them.

George Washington required just five seconds to hang up a quickie in the overtime with Rausch counting on a layup. Bob Groetzinger, also outstanding in the Colonials' cause, whipped in another layup after a pass from Gallagher and Konie followed with two more as Davidson was only a shell without Peters.

Rausch Scores

George Washington's overtime bid was made possible by Jim Rausch, the level-headed forward from Evansville, Ind., who stood 20 feet from the basket, his team two points behind and eight seconds to go, and dropped a field goal which knotted the count.

The Colonials were that close because Joey Gallagher went all the way to hang up a crip shot and then made a foul with less than a minute to go after he had just received a nasty bang on the head when knocked to the floor. It was the fourth foul for Peters and goodby to a good one-man ball club.

Please don't overlook John Konieszewski among those George Washington heroes, for big John played what was perhaps his greatest collegiate ball game, a tireless ball-hawk who developed a hot hand and poured in 15 points including five precious markers in the overtime period.

Peters, the conference's leading scorer of the season, was too much for George Washington during his stay. The shifty blond youngster, faster than anybody in the tournament, with an assortment of backhand passes and an under the basket shot which is unstoppable, made 11 of his team's 15 points in the first half as clubs were deadlocked at 15-all.

George Washington and Duke will meet at 8 o'clock tomorrow night for the title with a jam-packed house expected for the title test. Duke will be the betting favorite but the allegiance of the fans will unquestionably go to G. W. as the Blue Devils can do no right. They've won too much.

Caraway and Celinski Win A. A. U. Ring Titles

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

Jimmy Caraway, a fighting little 112-pound buzzsaw from Washington Boys' Club, and Pete Celinski, hard-punching 135-pounder frmo St. Marys Club, Alexandria, reached the goal of all amateur boxers last night at Turner's Arena when they added D. C. A. A. U. championships to their Golden Gloves titles as the finals of the A. A. U. boxing event unfolded before 1000.

National Training School won the novice team trophy, while St. Marys Club copped the senior team award.

Lew Pavone, of St. Marys also Another Golden Gloves champion, won the 160-pound title, but it was a hollow victory for him—he had no opposition.

Caraway outpunched Billy Kerge, of Apollo, to win handily. Celinski thoroughly outclassed Jimmy Hubbard, also of Apollo, closing the Northeast boys' eye completely.

Corbin Winner

John "Cotton" Corbin, the future paratrooper, who was given a three-day furlough to meet Marvin Marshall, of Gallaudet, for the 135-pound crown, did so with one of his best fights of the year. Marshall, who refused to take the crown even if Corbin had been called into the Army and who had offered to fight the Mullen-Pullman winner for the championship, put up a fine battle, but was clearly outpointed by "Cotton."

George Espina of Merrick, conqueror of Al Wankowicz, surprised with a kayo over Joe Gannon, Apollo Club, in 1:20 of the second round to win the 147 pound title. Gannon went down three times before the bout was stopped.

King Takes Title

Puggy King, 112 pounds; Charley Pell, 126 pounds, Phil Button, 135 pounds; Jewell Hunt, 147 pounds; Willie Trull, 160 pounds, and H. Vaughn, 175 pounds, were the novice champions crowned.

Terps Send 3 Into Ring Semifinals

Syracuse, N. Y., March 5.—Two technical knockouts, one by John Doolittle of West Point, son of Maj. Gen. Jimmy Doolittle, opened the twentieth annual Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association tourney at Syracuse University tonight.

Doolittle, a 155-pounder, undefeated in dual competition all season, stopped Benson Schwartz of Maryland, in 1:52 of the second round, and goes into the semifinals tomorrow. Harold Wells, of Syracuse, outpointed Alex Robenko, of Maryland, in the 145-pound class.

The other technical kayo was scored by Syracuse's Johnny McCardle in 1:50 of the first round, against Orient Martella of Penn State.

Beau Jack Again Beats Fritzie Zivic

Shoe-Shine Boy Scores Handily In Return Bout Before 18,813

By International News Service

New York, March 5—Belting Beau Jack made it two in a row over Fritzie Zivic tonight when he scored a unanimous 12-round decision over the Pittsburgh veteran before a crowd of 18,813 at Madison Square Garden.

In a vicious battle, despite the absence of knockdowns, the former Augusta shoeshine boy outpunched, out-mauled and out-finished the veteran Zivic, who fought an uphill fight against overwhelming odds.

Zivic had the experience and determination but the Beau had the youth, the spirit, and the ambition. He won the first five rounds on bull-dog pursuit of the Fritz and ringing body blows, mixed with an assortment of screwy uppercuts and round-house punches for which Zivic had no defense.

Couldn't Stop Beau's Attack

The Fritz, who fought only spasmodically in the boys' first meeting, tried to make a battle of it tonight but, like many another before him, could find no self-defense for the windmill style of the Beau.

The early going was vicious. Jack used roundhouse rights to the body and short, chopping uppercuts, while Zivic jabbed with a long left and threw occasionally effective high rights to the Beau's bobbing head.

Zivic managed to bloody the colored boy's nose in the sixth but Jack got in a couple of rights which opened a slight cut beneath the Pittsburgher's left eye.

The seventh round was the best of the fight. Jack hit Fritz with everything but Referee George Walsh, staggering him with a left hook and right cross. But just before the bell Zivic came out of a crouch and shook up Beau with an amazing flurry of head and jaw punches which electrified the crowd and caught the colored boy completely off guard. Nevertheless, it was Jack's round.

Beau Lands Low Blow

Though Jack won the eighth, it was awarded to Zivic becauses of a low punch by the Beau. Then Fritz won the ninth and Referee Walsh gave it to Jack for a similar infraction. The tenth was so close and hard-fought it was fairly called even. Zivic had a bit the best of the eleventh, beating Jack to the punch in the closing minute. The Beau had the best of a fast final frame.

In a slam-bang six-rounder, Artie Levine, 18-year-old middleweight walloper from Brooklyn, and Freddie Flopes, Puerto Rican clouter, belted each other all over the place to a draw. Levine scaled 158¾; Flopes, 156¼.

Gene Buffalo, 149, Philadelphia, one of Beau Jack's spar mates, took a close six-round decision from Isaac (A1) Jolson, 150¾, of New Orleans. Freddie Yelavich, 128½, Rochelle Park, N. J., did the same to Rufus Rogers, 125¼, Baltimore, in a four-rounder.

Gonzaga, Cadets Close Schoolboy Season Tonight

The final schoolboy basketball game of the local season tonight sends St. John's against Gonzaga with the Catholic title at stake. Game time will be 8:30 at Tech gym.

A new trophy, won last year by Georgetown Prep, will go to the winner of tonight's fray to hold for one year.

In the third meeting of the teams St. John's will be a distinct favorite despite the doubtful physical condition of two of its regulars, Chuck Dudley and George Hughes. Gonzaga will be at full strength as it tries to repeat a 24-15 triumph it recently scored after suffering a 38-to-32 setback at the hands of the Johnnies.

Bisons to Show Prize Rookies Here Tonight

Two of the American Hockey League's prize rookies are to go on parade at Uline Arena tonight when Coach George Mantha's Washington Lions entertain the Buffalo Bisons at 8:30 o'clock.

Goalie Gordie Bell, 17-year-old shutout king of the American League wh has recorded nine whitewashings in his first season of professional hockey, will be in the nets for Buffalo, while Gaston Gauthier, the Lions' colorful center who recently set a new league scoring record, will continue on the first line of the local icemen.

Bell has numbered Washington among his shutout victims this season, and has turned in several low scoring games against the Lions. The local pros have beaten the Buffalo net tender but once, and tied him in overtime on another occasion, 2-2.

Gaston Gauthier set a new American League record for a first year man last Wednesday when his goal and two assists against the Cleveland Barons hiked his point total to 50. Coach Mantha numbered Gaston among the finest rookies to enter the American League within the past five years.

Kurowski, resident of Reading, Pa., who was classified 1-A in January, told induction officers the injury was the result of a fall suffered as a child.

Randall Gumpert of Birdsboro, Pa., pitcher for the Newark club of the International League, also appeared for induction here today and was accepted. He applied for duty with the Coast Guard.

Delaware Quint To Face Gallaudet For Title After 41-40 Edge on C. U.

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, March 5.—Delaware U. and Gallaudet College advanced to the final round of the annual Mason-Dixon basketball tournament tonight by defeating Catholic U. and American U. in thrilling semifinal contests.

The Delaware Blue Hens won over Cotholic in the closing minutes of play after the Cardinals had held the lead throughout the contest.

Gallaudet used the same system against American, coming from behind in the last minutes to eke out a 45-50 victory.

Delaware and Gallaudet who will meet tomorrow at 9:15 p. m. in the championship struggle finished seventh and eighth respectively in the regular league season.

Delaware went off to an early 5-point lead against Catholic, but the Cardinals put on a concerted drive that carried them to a 10-point advantage at half time, when the score stood at 29-19.

Dick Scanlon, Catholic U. center and Mercak, Delaware guard, led in the first period scoring. Starting the second half, Catholic maintained a lead of from 6 to 13 points until less than four minutes remained of the game. Delaware then came on with a rush, a slick side court shot by Bill Cole tying the count at 38-all. George Barlow put in a foul shot to give the Blue Hens the lead. Each team scored one more basket before the final gun.

The break in the Gallaudet-American contest came when George Zuras, American's ace forward, went out on personal fouls after only six minutes of the second half had passed.

New York, March 5 (AP).—Fordham University was invited today to compete in the National invitation basketball tournament opening at Madison Square Garden March 18.

Indians Option Guy Named 'Ted'

Cleveland, March 5 (AP).—The Cleveland Indians today optioned Ted Sczepkowski, 19-year-old infielder, to the Baltimore International League club, where he played most of last season. Roger Peckinpaugh, Tribe vice president, said Szepkowski thus would be able to play with the Orioles and remain in high school until his graduation this spring, when he is expected to be called into service.

With Shirley Povich

The new type baseball the big leagues will probably adopt as the official ball for the duration is a cross breed, with a bit of a golf ball strain in its make-up. They call it a Balata cork center. Balata rubber is the stuff the manufacturers use in making the hard cover of a golf ball.

POVICH

Aside from its innards, the new baseball will be indistinguishable from the old ball, at least to the eye. It will still weigh in at the regulation 5½ ounces and the circumference will be the same. It's flight, the club owners hope, will be a bit longer. They're not quite sure about that, yet.

There was a little disgust with the ball in use at the end of the 1942 season. It was definitely on the dead side, and definitely different from the ball with which the leagues started the season. The long hitters, like Ted Williams, squawked loudly, declaring they had to swing their heads off to get a home run. All but the line-drive hitters were penalized.

It wasn't the manufacturers' fault. They couldn't continue to make balls to the early-season specifications on account of restrictions on wool. Toward the end of the season, the paper labels on the new balls bore the frank admission, "81 per cent new wool, 19 per cent re-used wool." It seems that the type of wool and the manner of winding the wool around the center governs the flight of a baseball to a greater degree than the type of center or cover.

Manager Joe McCarthy of the Yankees, who learned about wool as a bobbin boy in a textile factory, agreed that the ball was less lively. "Crumple a handful of new yarn in your fist and it springs back at you when you release it," McCarthy pointed out. "Try the same stunt with old yarn, and there's no bounce to it."

The ball gets much of its flight from the way the wool is wrapped, says Clark Griffith. "Wind the yarn tightly, and you have a lively ball. Wind it loosely, and you've got a dead ball. When the manufacturers submit specifications for the official ball, they always show us how it is to be wrapped, and they can control the liveliness of a ball that way."

The new Balata cork core is a composition of cork and the golf ball cover rubber, and it doesn't compose more than 5 per cent of the ball's volume. It's a marble-size pellet inside another cushion of rubber, and the latter will be a bit on the ersatz side, too. The pure rubber for the baseball is out for the duration, the baseball people have been told.

If the Balata cork ball is adopted, as seems indicated, then the Washington Redskins' football team must be credited with a mild assist. Griffith Stadium received specimens of the Balata ball last fall and experiments were conducted. With no baseball players available to swing a bat against the ball, the Redskin huskies were drafted for the task and Washington Club officials observed with satisfaction that the ball had plenty of flight.

"They knocked it over our fences and into the bleachers," said Griffith. "Of course they weren't up against much pitching, because there was a football player on the mound as well as at the plate, but you could tell that the ball was a bit more lively than last season's. That's what we wanted to arrive at. A ball with a little more rabbit in it. The Balata rubber seemed satisfactory."

The fastest ball the big leagues ever knew, according to Griffith, was the ball in use during the 1939 season when batting averages were up. "It was more lively than the ball with which Babe Ruth hit 60 home runs," said Griffith. "The ordinary .280 hitter was batting .310, and the infielders couldn't get out of their tracks before a grounder was past 'em. That ball was too fast. It cheapened the base hit."

The importance of a substantial core and new, tightly wrapped yarn is accentuated in the ability of the better ball to hold its shape. A loosely-wrapped ball with an inferior core flattens out when hit, and robs the hit of flight. It

Absenteeism Bill Meets Opposition

By the Associated Press

Some opposition to legislation against absenteeism developed yesterday at the Capitol.

1. A union official protested to the House Naval Committee that a bill providing for absentees to be reported to their draft boards would be a step toward turning the country into "a penal institution."

2. Representative Celler (Democrat) of New York asserted in the House that the word "absenteeism" is being used as "a catch-all phrase" in an attack on labor. Celler contended wilful absences from work at war plants were "isolated and exceptional."

3. The request of the House Labor Committee for authority to investigate "all labor conditions" was viewed by some naval committee members as a maneuver against the bill they are considering. If such an inquiry is undertaken, they reasoned, there will be demands that no labor legislation be enacted until it is completed.

(In the bitterest attack he has made on Administration policies since the Nation went to war, Senator Nye (Republican) of North Dakota, declared that "hunger and food riots" in the country will follow any attempt to maintain armed forces at their projected figure of 11 million men for 1943.

(In a long speech to the Senate, Nye went further by saying that despite record 1942 food production "there is want in our military training camps for some of the foods that build brain, brawn and morale."

Wheeler Broadcasts

(Coincidentally, a few hours after Nye made his speech, Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana also a prewar isolationist, went on the radio with an address that questioned the advisability of trying to maintain an armed force of 11 million.

(Senator Wheeler argued that to raise a military force of that size makes necessary the drafting of fathers with children, a step which threatens to "destroy" the home, "the very essence of American democracy."

Of fathers, Wheeler said: "If they are needed on the farms, or in the mine or factory, by all means let us put them there to replace single men, or young married men who have no children."

(Asked by The Post if he favored the Austin-Wadsworth bill to authorize the drafting of war workers, Wheeler replied: "If we are going to build up an army of 11 million men and feed and equip the world, we are going to have to go into totalitarian government and force people to work where the Government tells them to work.)

N. P. Alifas, a district president of the International Association of Machinists (A. F. L.), argued before the Naval Committee that the absenteeism measure would give employers the power to impose any conditions of work they desired on employes under threat of reporting their names to draft boards. Alifas also expressed concern lest "anti-labor members" of the House amend it to apply various restrictions to labor if the measure reaches the floor.

Grounds for Fear Discounted

Representative Lyndon Johnson (Democrat) of Texas, author of the bill, and Representative Maas (Republican) of Minnesota replied to Alifas that there were no grounds for his fear the reporting of names to draft boards would be misused.

"The local boards aren't going to send a man into the Army if he misses one day—it's the habitual slacker that we're after," Maas said.

Across the Capitol, The Senate Military Committee continued hearings on the Austin-Wadsworth bill allowing drafting of men and women, if necessary, for agricultural or factory work.

Grenville Clark, advocate of this legislation, directed much of his testimony to replying to views recently expressed by former President Herbert Hoover to another committee. Hoover questioned whether it was advisable to raise this year so large an army as is projected with its attendant drain of men from farms and industry. The knockout blow to Germany, he said, might be delivered more certainly in 1944 than 1943.

Hoover's Opinions Criticized

"We ought to repudiate the substance of what Mr. Hoover says—that time is on our side and we can take it easy," Clark said. He asserted that Hoover had been repeatedly wrong in his military predictions.

A proposal to prohibit draft deferment of anyone working less than 48 hours a week came from Representative Curtis (Republican) of Nebraska. A bill he drafted also would eliminate overtime pay for any work less than 48 hours a week and would prohibit draft deferment for anyone who, in the opinion of the local draft board, is guilty of absenteeism, taking part in a strike or work stoppage of any kind.

Celler accused Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, World War ace, of "lambasting labor from hell to breakfast" and drew the reply from Representative Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi that Rickenbacker "never attacked honest labor, but he has attacked labor racketeering that is slowing down production and causing the deaths of our boys on the battle fronts of the world." Some members applauded.

License Move

Tax Plan Hits At Press, Say Publishers

The American Newspaper Publishers Association asserted yesterday in a brief filed with the Supreme Court that a municipality is forbidden by the Constitution from imposing a license tax "as a condition precedent to the dissemination of information and opinion."

Elisha Hanson, counsel for the association, urged the tribunal to overrule a decision it delivered last June and to declare unconstitutional an attempt by three municipalities—Opelika, Ala., Fort Smith, Ark., and Casa Grande, Ariz.—to impose license taxes upon the sale of printed matter.

Constitutionality of the ordinances was sustained, by a five to four vote, in the June decision. Since then Justice Byrnes, who voted in favor of constitutionality, has resigned and been succeeded by Justice Rutledge, who as a member of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia voted to hold similar legislation unconstitutional.

At the request of members of "Jehovah's Witnesses" convicted of violating the ordinances, the tribunal recently agreed to reconsider its previous decision and oral arguments will be heard next week. Reconsideration will give the court an opportunity, if it so desires, to overrule the earlier opinion.

Hanson contended that the license taxes "establish a dangerous precedent for licensing the press by legislative devices which resurrect the evils the first amendment (guaranteeing freedom of the press) was intended forever to remove."

"The press," Hanson said, "is not an ordinary private business that is subject to licensing or control . . .

"The very fact of licensing to engage or continue in the business of publishing or circulating newspapers destroys the independence of the press . . .

"Freedom of the press is the right of the people to have information of vital public importance free from censorship, restraint or control of those in authority.

"So, when publishers are constantly on guard to challenge any impairment of a free press, they are not seeking special privileges for themselves or for any class of persons.

"Rather they are discharging their solemn responsibility as trustees of the right of all the people to open channels of inquiry and discussion on matters of public importance."

First Bill to Aid Veterans of War Passed by Senate

The Senate yesterday, on a voice vote, sent to the House the first major piece of veterans legislation of the present war—a measure which would make available to soldiers of this conflict the same vocational rehabilitation facilities and compensation for service disabilities provided for veterans of World War I.

Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri, is cosponsor of the measure with Senator Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts.

Their bill would authorize the Veterans' Administration to provide the training necessary to restore disabled soldiers—of whom about 800 already are back in this country—to civil life. If entitled to pensions less than those paid for total and temporary disability under existing laws, former soldiers in rehabilitation training would be entitled to compensation at the following rates:

If single with no dependents, $80 a month; if married, but no children, $90; if married and one child, $95, and $5 for each additional child; no wife but one child living, $90, and $5 for each additional child; mother or father, $10 for each dependent parent.

Suspect in Killing Draws Fine in Auto Title Case

Fine of $500 was imposed yesterday on Sanford H. Carrier, 26-year-old Silver Spring, Md., boxer, by Trial Magistrate Ralph G. Shure in Silver Spring Police Court. Carrier was charged with obtaining an auto title by giving false information to the Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

Carrier appealed the decision to the County Circuit Court and bond of $1000 was fixed by the court. He was in a cell at the Silver Spring substation guarded closely by Montgomery County policemen at a late hour last night while waiting to make bond.

Carrier attempted to commit suicide by slashing his wrists following his trial Tuesday and has been closely guarded by police since that time. Washington police want him for questioning in connection with the death New Year's Day of Paul Higgins, a war veteran.

Norway Minister Here for Parleys

Trygve Lie, foreign minister of the Royal Norwegian Government in London, has arrived in Washington for a series of conferences with Crown Prince Olav, Ambassador Morgenstierne and other Norwegian government representatives. While here he also will confer with officials of the American Government.

The Foreign Minister plans to remain in the United States for several weeks.

Retail Sales Up 10% Here, 27% in Area

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington department store sales showed a normal gain of 10 per cent in the week ended February 27 over the same 1942 week, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night.

In the same time, sales figures for the rest of the Fifth Federal Reserve District indicated that the buying spree (which was touched off by shoe rationing) was continuing. The Richmond Bank reported that retail sales in Baltimore were 47 per ent heavier than in the same 1942 week. Other cities in the area reported an average gain of 55 per cent in dollar volume, while the district as a whole showed an increase of 27 per cent for the week.

For the four weeks ended February 27, Washington department store sales were 23 per cent larger than in 1942. Baltimore volume in this period was 44 per cent greater; other cities showed an average gain of 64 per cent, and the district as a whole displayed a 34 per cent upsurge.

Nationally, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that department store sales last week were 26 per cent greater than during the corresponding week last year.

U. A. L. Elevates Henderson

Appointment of Paul Henderson, jr., well known in Washington from his previous associations here, as area manager for the air cargo department of United Air Lines, was announced yesterday.

Henderson, son of Col. Paul Henderson, who served as second Assistant Postmaster General during the Harding and Coolidge Administrations, was a partner in the local photographic firm of Hessler-Henderson, Inc., from 1932 to 1937. He joined United Air Lines' Washington traffic office in 1939 and moved to the company's Chicago traffic office in 1941.

Coordinated Food Program Is Demanded

By the Associated Press

The House farm bloc decided last night to take to the White House a demand that heads of all Government agencies dealing with matters affecting farming be required to agree quickly on a coordinated food production program.

This decision was reached at a meeting of the committee of 48 unofficial farm bloc organizations composed of one representative from each State.

The group appointed a policy committee of 13 to draft a suggested farm program to be submitted to Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission, Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board and heads of other agencies the farm bloc hopes to bring into agreement on a program.

Representative Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, was selected as chairman of the policy committee with Representative Risley (Republican), Oklahoma, as secretary.

Fulmer explained to reporters that the group's feeling was that the farm outlook now is badly muddled with the manpower outlook unsettled and the prospects for deliveries of farm machinery uncertain. With the planting season coming on, he said, there must be a decision, too, on one of two proposed plans for increasing farm production:

(1) A general rise in prices, advocated by many in Congress, or

(2) Incentive payments to farmers as proposed by Wickard.

It is proposed to draft definite suggestions, Fulmer said, then ask a joint conference next with Director James F. Byrnes of the Economic Stabilization Board and heads of affected government agencies.

Unless agreement is reached at this meeting, Fulmer said, it is proposed to take the whole matter in to the President.

Citizens' Group Seeks Harmony In PUC Affairs

A committee to make recommendations towards ending what was described as an unhappy lack of harmony in the operations of the District Public Utilities Commission was appointed by the Randle Highlands Citizens Association last night.

Other action taken included a resolution approving the pending bill in Congress granting suffrage to District residents; another asking that the Health Department establish health centers in the southeast section of the city; another asking the PUC to send mimeographed copies of its major decisions to the citizens associations; still another urged that plans for a junior high school for the Randle Highlands school site be drawn.

Congress also was asked to instruct bureaus and departments to notify interested associations when important hearings were to be held.

Absenteeism Curb

Bill Seeks Prohibition During War

By William F. Arbogast
Associated Press Staff Writer

A move to impose national prohibition for the duration of the war, by Act of Congress rather than by a constitutional amendment, was launched yesterday by Representative Bryson (Democrat of South Carolina, who said his aim was to curb absenteeism.

In the Senate meanwhile, a committee studying a compulsory manpower bill heard from Grenville Clark, New York lawyer sponsoring the measure, a statement that drinking is one of the chief reasons for absenteeism among workers. Clark suggested that liquor be rationed, "the way they do in Canada and England."

Bryson's bill, which was referred to the judiciary committee of which he is a member, would outlaw the manufacture, sale and transportation of liquor in the United States and possessions "until the conclusion of the present war and thereafter until the termination of mobilization" as determined by the President.

Bryson said it was introduced because of "growing concern among many Congressmen over the problem of absenteeism" and that it had the support of some prominent national organizations which he would not identify.

Edward B. Dunford, attorney for the Antisaloon League, said in a statement that the league "has not advocated and did not seek the introduction" of the bill because it believes the President under his wartime powers has authority to restrict or prohibit liquor.

Dunford added, however, that "there will be a growing demand upon Congress" for prohibition if the Government continues to restrict and ration necessary commodities but "ignores the waste of food, fuel, electric energy, transportation facilities and manpower involved in a nonessential luxury enterprise like the liquor traffic."

Three Actions Ease Rules On Driving

A series of actions tended greatly yesterday to lessen the stringency of rules governing the use of automobiles in Washington.

First among them was the announcement by a national OPA spokesman that pleasure driving cases would be considered in the light of the "honor system."

Second was the huge increase in business reported by tire recapping firms who said they were getting so many orders that some of them were 10 days to two weeks behind. This was the result of the OPA order permitting any motorist who so needed them to get recaps with only a minimum trouble.

The third was the clarification of the recent OPA order which relaxed requirements for the purchase of new cars, by Robert L. Lewis, president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association.

Lewis said the amendment to the automobiling rationing order means that a person whose requirements are covered by those listed in the "C" rationing book is eligible for the purchase of a new car, but, of course, has to obtain authorization through his rationing board. The new purchasing rule becomes effective today.

He said there were probably 220,000 new cars, frozen in the hands of dealers a year ago, which are available throughout the country.

On the other side of the picture Senator Harry Byrd, (Democrat) of Virginia, chairman of the joint Congressional Economy Committee, moved to curb the use of Government-owned cars by officials by introducing a bill which would make any official using such a car for his private benefit or pleasure subject to dismissal from office and to a fine of $1000 or a year in jail.

Motor Policeman Suffers Broken Leg

Motorcycle Policeman Joseph S. Davis, 30, of 1511 Franklin Street Northeast, suffered severe head injuries and a broken leg when his motorcycle struck a cement traffic island at Ninth Street and Brentwood Road Northeast yesterday. He was removed to Casualty Hospital where his condition was described as serious.

Peacetime Aim

Group Visions Jobs for All After War

A full peacetime employment in which a free economy would operate in a sphere as large as it effectively could occupy, supplemented by Government projects financed with excess savings accruing from full employment, was envisioned last night at the opening session of the Washington Conference of the League for Industrial Democracy.

"A society can obtain full employment if it has the will to do so," declared Dr. J. Raymond Walsh, director of education and research for the C. I. O. He scoffed at the idea that such an achievement is technically impossible.

Ideas Stressed As Weapons

One of three speakers who addressed the conference in Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida Avenue northwest, Dr. Walsh stressing the value of ideas as weapons, foresaw a carryover into peacetime of powerful conceptions which have been nourished and brought to fruition in war:

The idea that full employment, if attainable in wartime, should be equally attainable in peace; an increasing conception of our duties as individuals to the society in which we live, and the value of cooperative effort in solving a Nation's problem.

Up to Individuals

And on our "capacity imaginatively to be concerned with these problems," he declared, depends the progress which we shall achieve when the "terrible calamity of peace" hits our economy.

The other speakers were Dr. Eveline M. Burns, of the National Resources Planning Board, who discussed social security objectives, and Dr. Donald H. Davenport, U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, whose address was concerned with "The Problem of Demobilization." Harry W. Laidler, executive director of the League for Industrial Democracy, presided.

The conference will continue tonight and tomorrow afternoon.

Peril to School-Milk Program Seen

Curtailment of the number of needy school children who are receiving free milk in the public schools was foreseen yesterday by school officials if the demand for a 2-cents-a-quart increase in milk prices by producers is granted.

Harry Gardner, who has charge of purchasing the milk for District schools, said they were buying 20,000 half pints, or 5000 quarts a day. If the price is hiked, it will mean an increased daily outlay of $100, which must be passed on to the parents who are buying the milk for the children—at 1 cent a half pint at present.

There are 3000 needy school children whose parents are unable to give them the money to buy this milk. However, the District has been able to keep them supplied through use of the sponsorship money formerly allocated to WPA.

This so-called "free" milk will hav to be curtailed, possibly by reducing the number of children benefiting, Robert L. Haycock of the Board of Education, who has charge of this department, said.

In the meantime B. B. Derrick, manager of the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association, said they as yet had not been advised of any action on the request for the 2-cents-a-quart increase.

Traffic Accidents Show Sharp Drop Over 1942 Period

Traffic accidents during February decreased almost half the number reported for the same month last year, Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer announced yesterday.

The number of persons hurt also dropped, he pointed out, but not to the extent that accidents did. Accidents totaled 314 for the period this year as against 739 in February, 1942. Injuries dropped from 482 to 347.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

(Editor's note: Today and every Saturday Federal workers express their views and comments through this column. Mail contributions to Jerry Kluttz, editor.)

Gloom is a foot thick in my office. We have an important war job that is being delayed. It's clear to anyone that the minds of the officials whose responsibility it is to get out the work are on something else. And I've just found out what the "something else" is. It's the McKellar bill, which would require Senate confirmation for these officials.

The men in our office tend to their knitting and make an honest and sincere effort to do their work. The single exception is a personable and likable gentleman who spends most of his time with "my friends on Capitol Hill." He's a politician down to the tip of his big toes. I'm personally fond of this man, but I can't respect him for his office work for he hasn't the ability nor the background for it. His worth to the taxpayers is about 6 cents on every dollar he draws in salary.

About a week ago we heard that our politician-official had "arranged" with his friends in the Senate to refuse to confirm the chief of our office and he expects to get the important job. Our chief won't turn his little finger to secure Senate confirmation and neither will any of the other competent officials in my office. They will resign in protest against such a vote of no confidence and this small fry will return to private life along with them.

At first I was a bit sad and disappointed at this example of backstabbing. I'm now bitter and resentful. If similar conditions exist in other offices—and they surely must—I sometimes wonder how we're going to win this war on the civilian front. SMALL FRY.

What the people in High Point, N. C., where the War Department recently moved its Demobilized Records Section from Washington, D. C., would like to know is why are there 10 Army officers assigned to the section? These 10 officers are doing clerical work at big salaries, having a good time, when $1440 and $1620 clerks could be doing the same work.

There are two colonels, one lieutenant colonel, majors and captains. Ten officers and 400 civilian clerks. Surely these officers are needed on the battlefronts to help win the war. Why is an Army doctor, a colonel, needed to pore over files? She office functioned 25 years without a medical officer to read the record of dead soldiers. The Army needs doctors, but it has one in High Point reading old files when a civilian could do the job. EMPLOYE.

What do you think of the idea of the Government allowing "gardening leave" to Federal employes who have or will acquire plots of land for victory gardens? Heretofore I have taken all of my annual leave on Saturday mornings which gave me ample time to grow vegetables for the needs of my family during the greater part of the year. With the full Saturday work day and the drive against absenteeism in Government I must now alter my plans.

We who have established our gardens are willing to work more than 48 hours a week, but it's hard to do that and grow a garden, too. Congress is now writing a new pay bill and I'd like to see some provision made for garden work absences. H. S. M.

Our Government requests the physically handicapped to do their bit for the war. I'm one of them and I work for the War Department in the Pentagon Building. I want to help my country as much as possible and I am sure lots of other infantile paralysis cases like myself want to do likewise. I've never asked for pity or odds in holding a job. In my work I'm as proficient as most, and, I believe, better than thhe average.

There are tremendous distances to obe covered within the Pentagon Building which can't be helped, but surely something can be done to lessen distances handicapped people must travel outside the building. What I'd like to see done is an area as near as possible to the building set aside for handicapped people coming to work in cars instead of them being forced to park hundreds of yards away, as it is at present. I don't believe my request is unreasonable. HANDICAPPED.

The Budget Bureau, the Federal Diary reports, has vetoed a plan to give Federal employes Saturday afternoons off by working them longer during the week. The objections don't hold water. As long as we put in a full 48 hours why should anyone object if we got off a few hours earlier on Saturdays? Saturday afternoons are weary and dull affairs in my office and very little work is accomplished. The Congress is now working on a new pay bill for Federal workers and I'd like to see an amendment added to the bill which would allow us to put in our 48 hours and still get off early on Saturday afternoons. A. H. K.

Iron Workers Reject Union as Bargainer

Employes of the Gichner Iron Works, Inc., 1214 Twenty-fourth Street Northwest, yesterday voted 31 to 8 against having the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers Local 486, A. F. L., as their collective bargaining representative. The election was conducted by the National Labor Relations Board, according to Henry Gichner, vice president of the firm, who announced the results.

Objection Overruled

Lieut Col. Laurence F. Stallings, author of "What Price Glory," pleaded guilty yesterday in traffic court to a charge of speeding. He paid a $50 fine. Afterward he said he didn't mind the fine but that he objected to the proceedings being broadcast from the courtroom.

Overtime Bill Awaits More Study

Subcommittee Adopts Changes; Fails to Report Pay Measure Out

By Robert W. Harvey
Post Staff Writer

The Federal overtime pay bill remained in the hands of a Senate Civil Service subcommittee yesterday after an effort to report the measure to the full committee failed.

The subcommittee met and voted minor amendments, but did not decide on the recommendations to be made to the full committee. There was no change in the basic pattern of the legislation.

Several committee members who did not serve on the sub-group which held hearings on the bill sat in on yesterday's meeting, and this plan will be followed again at the next meeting in about a week.

Time to Study Bill

Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York, chairman of the subcommittee, said the next meeting probably would convene a week from Monday or Tuesday. The interval, he explained, would permit members to study the corrected bill and the record of the hearings, and the report to the full committee will be discussed then.

Although the system of full time and a half overtime payments and 15 per cent flat raises for non-overtime workers has so far been left intact by the subcommittee, indications were that the alternative of a flat wartime bonus would have to be thoroughly threshed out before the final action is taken.

Committee members—chiefly Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio—are interested in the possibility of substituting a flat bonus at least for the percentage raise now given nonovertime workers, if not in place of the entire premium extra hour pay system. They contend that a flat increase, the same method used to combat boosted living costs in the last war, would be simpler and more of an aid to low-salaried workers.

Amendments Voted

The amendments agreed to at yesterday's session, suggested by the Civil Service Commission and the Budget Bureau, provide:

(1) Workers whose pay is fixed by wage boards on a monthly or annual basis shall be specifically covered by the bill, although those whose wages are fixed by the boards on a daily or hourly basis are excluded.

(2) Overtime shall be paid only on hours actually worked, so that a day's absence with pay shall not count toward the computation of extra hours.

(3) A clarification of language authorizing the Civil Service Commission to set up regulations for administration of the new pay program.

(4) Authorization for the commission to take on certain classes of employes at higher than the lowest salary for their grade, in order to meet situations where supervisors were getting less money than the men they directed.

(5) A shifting of Library of Congress and Botanical Gardens employes into the overtime classification.

(6) Authorization for the Commission to put certain classes of employes on a flat raise basis, where it is demonstrated that overtime is impractical in their work.

Husband Prisoner Of Japs, Woman Heavy Bond Buyer

Mrs. Dorothy G. Cook of 3204 Nineteenth Street Northwest, invests her complete dependency allotment from the Navy Department, as well as more than 10 per cent of her salary, she said yesterday. She is remembering that her husband, Walter J. Cook, is a prisoner in Japan.

MRS. COOK

"I want my Government to have all the money it needs to bring the war to a victorious end as quickly as possible so that the day may be hastened when my husband will be returned to me," Mrs. Cook, a stenographer in the Chief Counsel's Office, Bureau of Internal Revenue, comments on her enrollment in the Payroll Savings Plan.

An aerologist in the Navy, Cook was stationed at Wake Island when it was captured December 22, 1941. The following September Mrs. Cook received a letter from him written from a prison camp at Tokyo. He said he was well, receiving good treatment, doing farm work and attempting to learn the difficult language of the Japanese.

GEORGE SYLVESTER VIERECK

Viereck Objects To Being Jailed With Thugs

While counsel used all the writs of the law to save him from prison for his propaganda, the Nazi agent, George Sylvester Viereck, remarked yesterday that "political prisoners" like himself are not well treated in America.

"Other civilized countries," said Viereck, "do not jail political prisoners in company with thugs and murderers; but they are held in fortresses and treated like gentlemen."

And sometimes they are just shot, too, Viereck conceded.

Viereck was a German propagandist in America during World War I. He went on Hitler's payroll some years ago and set up a huge organization which plunged into the isolationist crusade against aid to England and bitterly disputed every point of President Roosevelt's foreign policy.

Wrote Speeches for Congressmen

Viereck wrote speeches for Congressmen, set up isolationist committees, ran a publishing house and got his propaganda in the Congressional Record. He did not disclose these activities when he rgistered as a German agent. For this failure, he was convicted of violation of the Foreign Agents Act.

Because the trial jury was not told Viereck was entitled to keep quiet about these things if he did them on his own account, and not as a German agent, the conviction was reversed by a 5-to-2 Supreme Court decision Monday.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts yesterday set aside his two to six-year sentence and Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berg asked that Viereck be held for a new trial.

Col. O. R. McGuire, one of Viereck's attorneys, protested, contending that the indictment against his client ought to be dismissed. The justice overruled him and set a $1000 bond, which the German agent posted a few minutes later.

Asks Habeas Corpus Writ

Late yesterday, Colonel McGuire and Attorney Emil Morosini, jr., of New York filed a petition for a writ of habeas corpus. They said Viereck was unlawfully detained by the bond and asked that the indictment be declared dismissed and Viereck set altogether at liberty.

The writ raised several deep and novel questions of law, which Justice James M. Proctor said he wished to consider. The justice will take up the petition Wednesday. He may announce then whether he will reject Viereck's plea or grant the writ conditionally and order a hearing upon whether it shall be permanent.

While he waited in Justice Proctor's chambers, Viereck chatted with reporters. He said he found the District Jail a democratic place. Although he was no criminal, he said, he was as well treated as the thugs and murderers, the aristocrats of crime.

Captain Green Praised

Viereck praised Capt. E. A. Green, the District Jail superintendent, for his efforts to improve the lot of the prisoners. But he disliked the idea of being in jail at all, for "a political offense," pointing out that his father and grandfather were detained in fortresses when they got in trouble with the German government.

Agreement Marks PUC Bus Hearing

Capital Transit, Citizens' Groups Reach Accord on Route Protests

General agreement between the Capital Transit Co. and Citizens' Association representatives protesting revisions in the routing of Chillum, Takoma and Petworth buses was indicated last night following an all-day hearing before the Public Utilities Commission.

Two principal issues were the routing of buses by the Barnard Elementary School at Fifth and Decatur Streets Northwest, and the extension of the express zones on these buses from the intersection of New Hampshire and Georgia Avenues northward to Grant Circle.

Dean J. Locke, Capital Transit chief engineer, submitted alternative routes by which passage of buses past the Barnard School could be eliminated. This proposal was declared acceptable by John H. Connaughton, representing the Federation of Citizens Associations, and it is probable that it will be approved by the PUC.

Express Limit Fought

The extension of the express limits to Grant Circle was protested by George A. Corbin of the Manor Park Citizens Association, who pointed out that this would make bus patrons from this area use the Georgia Avenue streetcar lines. Both issues were taken under advisement by the commission.

Practically the only dissension in the day's proceeding was between minority PUC member, Gregory Hankin, and Chairman James H. Flanagan, over the question of admissibility of questions about rate reduction. Flanagan had ruled out such a question by Corbin, who asked if rate reduction shouldn't follow from the curtailment of service.

"Of course anything inimical to the utility shouldn't go into the record," was Hankin's comment.

"That's just another of the remarks that you are fond of making and as such should, I suppose, go into the record," Flanagan replied.

Bus Route Changes

The changes proposed by the company engineers to by-pass the school house are:

That the portion of the already scheduled all-day route J-6 service which would operate inbound in the morning rush period and outbound in the afternoon rush period between the Takoma area and Gallatin street be designed as route J-1 service and be operated from and to Fifth and Dahlia streets terminal as heretofore, instead of from and to the terminal at Laurel and Eastern avenues.

That the redesignated route J-1 operate over Fifth street between Dahlia street and Kansas avenue, over Kansas avenue and Sherman Circle, between Fifth street and Thirteenth street and via Thirteenth street between Kansas avenue and the downtown terminal at Thirteenth and D streets N.W., with limited stop limit at Fifth and Gallatin streets.

That route J-6, as modified above; route J-3 and the new route P-4 be routed along Kansas avenue between Fifth street and Sherman Circle and then along Illinois avenue between Sherman Circle and Grant Circle.

Mrs. Lane Is Transferred To District Jail

Mrs. Edythe Dodsworth Lane, 42, was held at the District Jail last night pending trial as an accomplice of Thomas Jordan, convicted slayer of Mrs. Elizabeth Jaynes in the Garden T Shoppe holdup of 1931.

She was transferred to the jail from the Women's Bureau where she was held following her return from Berkeley, Calif., last Sunday. She denies any knowledge of the holdup or the fatal shooting.

She was brought back to Washington on the strength of Jordan's statement that she drove the getaway car. Thursday, however, he refused to discuss the case with detectives and indicated he will not testify against her.

With the Government's case hinging on his testimony his attitude gave rise to the possibility the indictment may be quashed.

Nearly $1000 in District funds were spent to return the woman here, despite the fact she is a Federal prisoner under indictment and should have been transported by United States marshals.

51 More Casualties Announced by Navy

The Navy announced yesterday 51 casualties in Navy forces, including 8 dead, 17 wounded and 26 missing, none from this area.

This brings to 24,119 the total of Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard casualties reported to next of kin since December 7, 1941.

4 D. C. Bills Due for Action In House Soon

The House District Committee voted yesterday to report favorably to the House on four local bills, with the long-pending McGehee Unemployment Compensation bill heading the list.

Action on pay raise legislation for District police, firemen and teachers was deferred, however, and referred to the police and fire subcommittee headed by Representative McMillan (Democrat) of South Carolina for hearings. Chairman Randolph said the membership thought the subject "so important" that it should be studied carefully and that the pay status of all District of Columbia workers should be examined in connection with the bills.

McMillan said that his subgroup will get busy at once and try to report back within a week.

Other Bills Approved

The other bills, which were approved by the committee, with almost a full membership in attendance, were:

(1) A bill to permit the Industrial Wage and Safety Board to allow local concerns to keep women employes on the job longer than 48 hours a week in cases where it is shown the overtime will aid the war effort. The bill was passed by the House last session but lapsed in the Senate.

(2) A bill placing the American Tree Association under the protection of the property tax exemption bill passed last session.

(3) A bill authorizing St. Elizabeths Hospital to purchase butter substitutes if they are unable to acquire enough butter to serve their patients.

The unemployment compensation bill, which has been in and out of the committee for two years, will substitute a sliding scale of employer contributions—ranging down as low as one-tenth of 1 per cent—for the flat 2.7 per cent tax now in effect. An "experience rating" system would allow employers with good employment records to pay less than those who sent a higher proportion of workers onto the unemployment lists to draw benefits.

It also specifics that the tax shall be boosted back to the higher rate if the benefit fund at any time falls below a specified amount.

Surplus Built up

Reason for the readjustment of the rates is that a surplus of almost 35 million dollars has been built up in the benefit fund under the present tax.

John A. Marshall, executive officer of the Unemployment Compensation Board, told the committee that the present ratio of income to outlay was better than five to one. He asserted, however, that he was "on the fence" on the question of reducing the tax, pointing out that "nobody can tell what's ahead of us" and that the excess funds might well be needed after the war to aid in a readjustment of our economy to a peacetime basis.

Representatives of the Board of Trade, Merchant and Manufacturers Association and other civic groups urged enactment of the bill, declaring that it is unfair to take surplus funds from employers and leave them idle in the U. S. Treasury. They pointed out that employers are the only ones who contribute to the fund, with the workers who benefit paying nothing, in answer to labor group opposition to the tax question.

Victory Sidelights

Women Farm Volunteers Are Lauded

Food Administrator Wickard yesterday praised the American Women's Voluntary Services for sponsoring the three-week intensive farm course to open Monday at the University of Maryland for the purpose of turning women volunteers into efficient farm hands.

"The Department of Agriculture is pleased to note," he wrote Mrs. Dean Acheson, director of the A. W. V. S. agricultural division, "that A. W. V. S. is encouraging women to take farm courses."

American farmers, he said, will have to depend on much help from women workers this year, and A. W. V. S. will find that its program will bring "big dividends this summer and fall as the crops mature."

Women who want to enroll for the course still can do so, Mrs. Acheson said, by calling A. W. V. S. headquarters. They will live at the university except for Saturday afternoons and Sundays, and most of them promise to accept farm work for at least three weeks in return for the course.

She predicted that many of the women would take full-time jobs as dairy maids to help solve the critical Maryland dairy labor shortage.

Exhibit to Open Monday

An exhibit of all the Schools-at-War Scrap Books which have been made by District public school students will go on exhibit in the board room of the Franklin Administration Building, Thirteenth and K Streets Northwest, Monday through Friday, from 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m., it was announced yesterday.

Following the exhibit, it was reported, some of the books, replete with suggestions for wartime curriculum, will be sent to the Treasury Department. It was also announced that during the week beginning March 22 there will be comprehensive exhibits of war activities in the schools in Central and Cardozo High Schools.

Schools in Jeep Drive

The Treasury Department announced yesterday that public schools here may qualify for a special certificate for the successful completion of a "jeep" campaign, to run through April 19. Students will conduct a campaign to finance the construction of a jeep through the sale of war securities in the amount of $900.

Schools must have succeeded in reaching their goal during the announced period. The goal must be higher than previous war savings sales averages over similar periods, but in any case not less than $900. The national school jeep construction goal is $10,000.

Bank Answers Government In Check Suits

Answers were filed yesterday by the National Metropolitan Bank in two suits brought against the bank for the recovery of a total of $55,803.48 which the Government alleges it had paid the bank for fraudulent checks originally issued by the Government to former Government employes.

In each case the checks had first been cashed at the Anacostia Bank and cleared through the National Metropolitan Bank which was sued by the Government because the bank was the last prior indorser on the checks.

The first answer related to the Government's suit to recover $37,742.65 which was the amount represented by 326 checks cashed by Samuel N. Hedges, former superintendent of painters at the Senate Office Building, who was arrested in June, 1941, and later pleaded guilty to padding the payroll and receiving the checks made out to fictitious persons.

Checks Were "Normal"

The bank contends there was nothing about the checks to indicate they were bogus as they were "normal in form, bore the seal of the United States and that each was signed and validated by an officer of the United States vested with the authority to sign checks in its behalf in payment of legitimate obligations."

The second answer, similar to the first, contended that $18,060.83, representing 144 forged checks cashed by the Anacostia Bank but cleared through the National Metropolitan Bank, should not be returned to the United States Government because the checks had been cashed "with the same faith and confidence" as they had been issued.

The Government's suit to collect the money grew out of the case of James H. Foley, a civilian employe of the Navy Department who is alleged to have forged endorsements on 144 checks entrusted to his care for delivery to the proper persons. The checks were cashed between July, 1936, and November 1938, the answer said.

In November 1938, the answer states, the paymaster of the United States Marine Corps, ordered an investigation of the missing checks and that Foley, upon hearing of this, went to New York and committed suicide.

Payees Names Forged

"Foley forged the signatures of the payees upon each check, and either cashed or deposited them at the Anacostia Bank where Foley maintained a checking account and received the proceeds which he converted to his own use," the answer states.

The bank states that the Government owes to the public the duty to issue only legitimate checks and that if it issues fictitious checks, warranting them to be genuine, fair play should require that it bear the loss."

Baby Broker Convicted in Adoption Case

Mrs. Collins, Who Provided Infant For $270, Found Guilty of Theft

Mrs. Ann Collins, 50, was convicted yesterday in Justice James W. Morris' court on two counts of larceny after trust, brought as a result of her participation in a "baby broker" adoption case.

The jury of seven women and five men considered the case for five and one-half hours before reaching their verdict. Mrs. Collins was released on bond pending sentence.

United States Attorney Edward M. Curran and his assistant, George McNeil, who prosecuted the case, brought out testimony during the trial which indicated that Mrs. Collins had received $270 from a Washington couple, who had been referred to her by a columnist, when they asked for advice on adopting a baby, and that she had failed to apply the money for the purposes it had been paid.

Testimony during the trial was to the effect that Mrs. Collins met the District couple last fall and entered into an agreement whereby she undertook to furnish them with a baby at some future date. At this time she was paid $50 by the couple for the board and room of the unwed girl who was to have the baby.

In June, 1941, it was stated, Mrs. Collins and her daughter were called to the Arlington, Va., home of the girl and at 5 a. m. delivered the baby themselves, because, Mrs. Collins testified, the physician arrived after the birth.

Two hours after the birth of the child it was given to the Washington couple, who then paid Mrs. Collins an additional $220. The receipt for this money, which was produced in court, stated it would be used for medical bills, board and room for the mother and for obtaining the adoption papers.

It was proved that the physician who attended the mother after the birth never had been paid, that no board and room had ever been paid and that the adoption papers never had been obtained.

The case was brought to the attention of the District Attorney's office by the Board of Public Welfare which investigated at the behest of the foster parents when they sought to get the birth certificate to permit a legal adoption.

The case recalled the vigorous effort which has been under way for several years to obtain a more adequate adoption law for the District. Such a law, it has been pointed out, would assure that only trained and competent persons be entrusted with the placement of children, and that the welfare of the child, of its mother and of the foster parents should be the major consideration at all times.

War Relief Opens Exhibit On Greek Life

Priceless art treasures rubbed shoulders with the humble furnishings of a peasant's cottage at the exhibit of Greek life and culture that opened at the United War Relief Center, 1218 Connecticut Avenue, yesterday.

Among the guests were Ambassador and Mme. Diamantopoulos of Greece. Heading the list of patrons was Mrs Franklin D. Roosevelt. Also attending was Archbishop Athenagoras, of the Orthodox Greek Church, in North and South America. He is from New York.

Besides the ancient works of art there were shown embroideries from the Greek islands and enlarged photographs of modern Greeks in their present struggle for freedom.

The exhibit will be open to the public, beginning today, from 10 a. m. to 6 p. m., without charge. It will be open during the remainder of the month on Sundays also from 3 p. m. to 6 p. m.

Meningitis Increases

There have been 28 cases of meningitis in the District since the first of the year, the Health Department reported yesterday. Although this is far above the 11 cases reported for a similar period last year, Assistant Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger said that it was in no wise indicative of an epidemic and was no cause for alarm to the Health Department.

News of the Women's Clubs

By Genevieve Reynolds

There are several reasons why the Washington Girl Scouts' party this morning, from 10 to noon, in the Shoreham Hotel will be a significant one. In the first place, materialistically speaking, it probably will be the last time candy will be on the menu for the duration. Then the get-together initiates a series of events celebrating the thirty-first birthday of Girl Scouting in America, which of course honors Juliette Low, the founder of the Girl Scout organization in the United States.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

In fact, the purpose of the party for Girl Scouts of District 11 and 111 is to turn in the pennies collected for the Juliette Low Memorial Fund. Theme will be international friendship, which was emphasized by Juliette Low in the very beginning of the organization. Incidentally, the pennies are voluntary contributions from the Scouts to help girls in war-torn countries. Three thousand dollars will be given to Mme. Chiang Kai-shek while she is in this country and a similar amount will be sent to England this year. This fund was started in 1928 as a memorial to Juliette Low, who died in 1927. It was started to spread scouting all over the world and to establish international camps.

Highlight of the program will be the showing of Girl Scout motion pictures depicting life at Camp May Flather, International Day at Little Scout House and the Girl Scouts who compose the Junior Air Reserve, Air Youth Division. Mrs. Clarence Norton Godwin, of the National Aeronautic Association, liaison officer between the Girl Scouts and the Junior Air Reserves will be present, as will2Mrs. Jesse Jones, Mrs. Paul McNutt, Mrs. Ralph Bard, Mrs. Robert Patterson, all members of the Women's Auxiliary of the Air Youth Division, National Aeronautic Association, and Mrs. Frederick Brooke, a national vice president of the Girl Scouts.

Press Attache to Talk

Anne Darlington has some definite ideas about how folk should get acquainted. For example, she believes that many lonely girls don't go places simply because people designate the gatherings as a party for Government girls.

"Nobody likes to be tagged in such an offhand manner," said Miss Darlington.

"I believe the newcomers would be happier if they felt as if they actually were participating in civic or community activities."

Not only does Miss Darlington want Miss X of Texas to meet Mr. Y from Conecticut but she desires that the foreigners in our midst be brought into the family circle.

With this thought in mind, as chairman for Civilian Mobilization, Recreation, Education and Hospitality of the Dupont Circle Area, Miss Darlington has arranged an interesting program with an international flavor for the organization's meeting Monday night, 8:30 o'clock, at Scotts Hotel, 2131 O Street Northwest.

Dr. Wladislaw, press attache at the Polish Embassy, will be guest of honor and principal speaker. Sergt. Walter Lewicki of the U. S. Navy Band will accompany a group of young girls of the Polish Society who will present a number of Polish folk song and dances. Mrs. Lewicki, president of the society, will have charge of the program.

Doings of the Day

And One Flew West

By Anne Tedlock Brooks

CHAPTER XXI

She drove to the field with Hugh in his car, leaving her own at the Shuffleboard. When they pulled up beside the hangar she saw her new student waiting beside one of the little trainer planes. She smiled, pointing him out to Hugh.

"You were almost like that a few weeks ago," she said. "Sometimes I think it's the most fun an instructor has—taking one of those kids up on their first flight."

Hugh grinned a little, but there was grimness in the set of his lips. "I suppose I did look like that," he said, "but somehow I never felt quite like a simple novice. Oh, I was one, of course, but I didn't really feel like one. When I looked at that plane of yours the first time I didn't see it for what it was. I saw a Flying Fortress, with guns sticking out all around and heavy armor-plate guarding its vital sections, and bombs loaded in its belly. I saw my brother Jimmy knocking out five Jap planes and then diving in flames into Pearl Harbor . . ."

Judith felt her throat tighten and for a moment she said nothing. Then she opened the door slowly and put one foot on the running board. "You do have a job to do, don't you, Hugh?" she said.

Hugh sat there a moment, staring off toward the field. And then he said, "I can't forget Jimmy at Pearl Harbor, Judith. I think about that all the time. And some day, after my training in the east with the Air Corps, I'm going to fly west. I'm going to finish the job that Jimmy didn't have time to do. . . ."

"I think of a rhyme from childhood," Judith said. "'One flew east and one flew west—'. I don't remember the rest of it."

"'—and one flew over the cuckoo's nest.' I think that's the other part," Hugh said. "That would be Tokyo—and I hope to be that 'one' they're talking about all the way through. First east, then west, then fast with bombs to the cuckoo's nest."

Judith laughed and said, "I repeat, Hugh, you have a job to do."

Hugh turned to her and smiled, throwing off his mood. "I do," he said. "And so do you. I mustn't keep you. Go and put that young monkey through his baptismal flier."

"Oh!" Judith gasped. "What a horrible pun! Quite beneath you, Hugh, really!"

She turned then and went over to the plane, swinging her arms to match long strides and feeling strangely exhilarated, as if the morning had gotten off to a wonderful start.

At noon, when she saw Johnny Sinclair for the first time that day, he was in the office and was in one of his increasingly frequent rages over Jinx Atwood. "Where the devil is he?" he was demanding of Cherry Mason. "I've been in here four times this morning, between flights, and haven't seen him once. And his records indicate that he hasn't had a single student off the ground."

Cherry merely shook her pretty head and grimaced at Hugh McAllister, who sat in a chair at one side of the office, apparently waiting to talk to Johnny.

Hugh grinned at Judith as she came in, and almost laughed aloud at the long face she made at Johnny.

"That's all right, Judy," Johnny said. "You can make fun of it, but the situation is darned serious. You've had four kids up this morning and I've had four—and the great Atwood hasn't found time for a single one."

"I saw him in the hangar a while ago," Hugh volunteered.

"In the hangar?" Johnny exclaimed. "What's he doing there? The mechanics can take care of that end of things. His job is in the air or in the office."

Hugh lifted his reddish brows as Johnny glared at him, and he said drolly, "Just reporting what I saw, sir. I didn't put him there."

Both girls laughed outright and Johnny, subdued, returned to the report he was working on.

Judith filled out her log book for the last student she'd had up and then said she'd see everyone later and started out of the office. Hugh followed her after a moment, remembering that he'd driven her down from the Shuffleboard.

"I don't mind walking," Judith called back when he offered to drive her. "It just takes a minute."

Hugh insisted, however, so they got into his car. He was silent on the short ride, seemingly deep in thought, and when she got out at her car, he cleared his throat and said, "I don't suppose you ever have occasion to go up with Atwood—or fly his plane, do you?"

Judith frowned and said, "No—but why do you ask?"

"Oh, I don't know," Hugh said. "He just seemed kind of nervous this morning, or something. I felt kind of glad I wasn't one of his students."

"Whatever do you mean?" Judith asked, a trifle sharply. She felt that some slur on Jinx was implied in the remark and was quick to defend him.

Hugh glanced at her quickly, accurately sensing her reaction. "Nothing at all," he said. "I probably shouldn't have mentioned it." He grinned disarmingly and called "See you later," as he backed out of the parking space.

The Food Crisis

"It's truly magnificent the way this country is meeting the food crisis," remarked Mrs. Adelbert Twaddle as the 11 guests she was entertaining at a bridge luncheon took their seats.

"Yes, it really shows we Americans can take it," observed Mrs. Ezekiel Puffer." What a perfectly marvelous fruit cup! With fresh pineapple!"

"I hope it's good," said Mrs. Twaddle, "for it's about all we're going to have to eat. Our family's simply living on fruit these days because we can't get anything else. Do have some of the cheese wafers."

"They're w o n d e r f u l!" exclaimed Mrs. Bertrand Nibble. "Did you make them yourself?"

"Oh yes," r e p l i e d Mrs. Twaddle. "Our family's simply living on cheese days. I suppose we'll all s t a r v e when it's rationed."

"The American housewife is truly doing her bit in the war effort," c o m m e n t e d Mrs. Chauncey Banal. "Oh-h, consomme Madrilene! With croutons!"

"Don't you think that what we are all going through is really good for us?" asked Mrs. Percy Muffin as she buttered a cheese wafer.

"Yes, undoubtedly, we needed this toughening up," volunteered Mrs. Demetrius Oxley.

"It's the salvation of our Nation!" exclaimed Mrs. Banal. "We've been getting too soft . . . Don't tell me these are squabs!"

"Yes, they were all I could get," said Mrs. Twaddle. "I'm really ashamed to serve fowl since everybody's virtually living on nothing else these days, but the butcher couldn't get the filet mignon he promised me."

"I'd just as soon have squab," spoke up Mrs. Sinbad Smirky. "I haven't seen any beef for so long I've lost my taste for it."

"It's really remarkable how we can steel ourselves to do without t h i n g s," observed Mrs. Bridgeport Billow. "Oh-h, popovers! I adore them!"

"Take two and butter them while they're hot," urged the hostess. "And by the way those are fresh peas, I shelled them myself!"

"No!" chorused the guests.

"Yes! You know I never thought I'd come to shelling peas, again, but you never can tell what you can do until you have to."

"After all, this is war!" observed Mrs. Banal.

"New potatoes!" exclaimed Mrs. Clarence Twitter. "Don't tell me these have come out of your garden already!"

"No, but we'll have some later. We're going to plant a huge garden—to keep from starving to death. Did you get any of the broiled tomatoes Mrs. Billow?"

"Yes indeed. What a lovely color scheme your vegetables make!"

"Well since we're virtually living on vegetables these days I try to make them as attractive as possible . . . Do please everybody take another popover and butter it while it's hot to eat with the rose geranium jelly . . . Has the stuffed celery been around? . . . And the pickled peaches?"

"This is really an excellent wartime meal," observed Mrs. Puffer.

"Well I just try to do the best I can with what little I have," said the hostess.

"That's the true American spirit for you!" commented Mrs. Banal. "You know I really ought to take another popover but—"

"Go a h e a d," said Mrs. Twaddle. "There's so little else"

"Well, it's really a good thing we're feeling the pinch of war on the home front," said Mrs. Nibble. "Oh that's my favorite salad—avocado!"

"Take another hot popover to eat with your salad," urged Mrs. Twaddle.

"I'm really glad for the sake of our figures we do have skimpy rations these days," said Mrs. Arthur Dumpling.

"Yet, of course, we should eat enough to keep up our strength," said Mrs. Oxley, helping herself to another pickled peach.

"I think we can hold up all right if the food shortage doesn't get any worse," said Mrs. Muffin."

"We'll be all the better for a little starvation," remarked Mrs. Billow. "Oh, what a perfectly luscious dessert! Buttered pecan pie a la mode!"

Fashion Find

By Jeanne Contini

You can call it Beau Brummell, South American, or anything that intrigues you, but . . . in plain language it's a bolero suit. A bolero doesn't need cream-puff names to coax you into buying it. There are a host of reasons why this fashion crops up every spring as inevitably as pink hyacinth at Easter. It is young with all the nuances; at the age of 8 it's perky, at 20 it's svelte, at 40 it's trim. It gives a lift to the figure of a small woman and balances a tall. It emphasizes a tiny waist and minimizes hour-glass hips. It's becoming to every figure and every age. This year it has more merit than ever, being in addition to all the other things, a conservation fashion.

This bolero suit is . . . and heaven too. The fabric is 100 per cent virgin wool. The bolero is waist-length, fitted when closed, but stays open with a nice swing. The skirt comes high and lined with buckram at the waist to keep it as slick as a toreador's and give you a long smooth line over the hips. It also hits well above the bottom of the jacket, thus preventing that awkward puff of blouse that usually threatens to creep out and spoil the back view. Wear it to work with a crisp cotton shirt . . . to dinner with lace ruffles. Try the top with your slacks and the skirt with any blouse and a flower-fresh spring sailor. A watch chain clipped across the waistline plus a pair of sharp white gloves give you the "dandy" look. A Peter Pan collar, a bow tie, a beret make it as crisp and young as a sunbonnet.

Last but no means least it will set you back less han $20. Get it in navy or gray and you have the mainspring of your wardrobe for the season.

Rationing Made Easy

The wise shopper has made up her mind to understand point rationing, and leaves typewriter or baby—as the case may be—to devote a few minutes to this new kind of medium of exchange with coupons.

Here's what they're saying over the backyard fence.

Difficulties with the "money" budget are apt to be forgotten in the bewilderment with which we view red and blue coupons, points of varying "demoninations" and the table of point values for processed foods. Let's take one easy step at a time and soon we'll be marching into grocery stores and spending our points with as much savoir faire as we spend our money!

You will endear yourself to your grocer if you make out your grocery list in advance and consult your table of point values to find out how many points it will take. If you spend your points wisely, allowing say 12 points per person weekly, you'll not find yourself short before OPA payday! As you know you're allowed 48 points for the first rationing period which is approximately one month. The blue stamps A, B and C will be used for this period only, and in your book you'll find stamps with point values 1, 2, 5 and 8. Of course you should spend the high ones first, as you can't get "change" from your coupons.

If you're wise, before giving up valuable stamps, you'll buy fresh produce which is not rationed. If you buy these foods in season, you'll save enough stamps to invite the Joneses over for a Saturday night snack. A low point value is given to commodities which are most plentiful, and vice versa. However, it is possible that some of the low point foods may be quite expensive in money value. Another way to save your points and money is to buy in large containers. When you're shopping don't tear out any of the stamps until you are paying the grocer for your purchases.

Let's take another look at this ration book. The red coupons you see are going to be used whenever meat is rationed.

Some people are doing more shopping by mail, too. All you do is tear out your stamps and send them with the order.

It really takes only a short time to get acquainted with this system, and soon we'll learn to spend both money and stamps "rationally." Point values will change from time to time, but the underlying principles are the same. We've heard, too, that some far sighted ladies are already using home canned fruits and vegetables, and trying out new menus using nonrationed rice, spaghetti, macaroni and various cereal products. And then, whether you have a window box or an acre, what could be more fun, or patriotic too, than converting it into a Victory Garden?

Women Now Take Over Job of Making Maps for Army, Navy

By Martha McLean

Where only a couple feminine workers were to be found in the comfortable days before Pearl Harbor—in the once male stronghold of the Coast and Geodetic Survey chart division—some 400 women are now doing a major part in making more than a million maps a month for the Army and Navy.

Glamor, lots of it, though not a specified requisite for the jobs, has invaded the draftsman's sacred precincts and the clamor and excitement of the pressroom.

In the big, airy rooms sprawled throughout the Commerce Building, almost all the normal peacetime chart work of the bureau has been set aside and an expanded staff is now bending its energies for the naval and military services, making maps of small strategic pieces of the globe—or ones that may become strategic, maps with infinite detail to make the enemy squirm.

At the drafting board the delicate touch of a woman's fingers is an understandable advantage, but even in the pressroom where heavy work must be done, the foreman has only praise for his crew of seven girls. "Everything that a man does, they do," he says.

The pressroom "uniform" is slacks or coveralls. Bureau higher-ups were afraid that the women might balk at this requirement. The girls were delighted.

Like New Jobs

Three comely lasses on the day shift were working in a local dimestore only t h r e e weeks ago. Their new work is hard, they admit, but unanimously agree "It's easier than pleasing the customers."

At one time there were 10 girls working at the presses. Two dropped by the wayside; another quit because she got another job—as a welder. Three of the seven now working there are sisters. Mildred Bailey, 22, of 1112 Thirteenth Street Northwest, works in the daytime. Her sisters, Lillian and Hildred, are on the swing shift.

There are still 70 men left in the pressroom, but "the seven" are a definite wartime trend.

In fact only two steps in the long and complicated map process are without women workers now. There are no female photographers—yet. And making the plates from which the maps are printed takes strong, specially skilled workers.

Approval from on high of the way the women are fitting in has come from the survey director, Rear Admiral Leo Otis Colbert, who says they are "doing very satisfactorily."

There were no actual "men only" signs at Coast and Geodetic Survey before the war. It was just that no women worked there because Civil Service didn't certify any.

Then the supply of men draftsmen ran out. Women, many of them with artistic training, are filling in after a four weeks' training course.

School Later

One of them is an assistant instructor now. Dark-haired, artistic Janet Gift, 22, of 2011 Kalorama Road Northwest, took her degree at Duke University in June with the intention of becoming a biological artist. After the war she plans to attend Johns Hopkins Medical Art School, but in the meantime she has just happened to take a drafting course at Duke. So she voluntarily put an end to her college career for the duration and is putting her "odd course" to practical war use.

Said she, "After all I couldn't just go to school when there's a war going on."

After the draftsmen (and now draftswomen) do their bit—a separate drawing must be made for each color on the finished map; then drawings are transferred to large photographic negatives. Here again girls with art ability, several trained at Washington's own Corcoran Gallery, some trained abroad, have found a war use for their talents. They touch up sketchy lines in the negative, fill in pin-hole dots and make corrections.

No hand lettering is done on drawings or negatives. Nimble feminine fingers subdue the sticky curling bits of transparent printed labels which are applied to the negatives.

After the plates are made and the maps printed, last minute changes must often be made on the finished map. No map leaves the office until it is corrected to conform with the very latest data available. Once 22 men made these hand corrections, more than 500,000 of them a month. Now all but five workers are girls.

Freshly graduated from McKinley High School last month, 18-year-old Hazel Slifer of 2803 Twentieth Street Northeast can now turn out two or three corrections a minute with her electric eraser which works like a dentist's drill. An experienced worker can average 25,000 a month.

Like their proverbial last word, women have the last hand" in the map business. They run the machines that rapidly fold the charts. With this work of the Coast and Geodetic Survey map makers is ended; the work of their maps has just begun—in the hands of the United States armed forces.

Mrs. Rousseau Honor Guest At Reception

Edward Van Devanter's pleasant party at the Sulgrave Club yesterday afternoon was a "repeat performance" for Mrs. Henry H. Rousseau, here to visit Capt. and Mrs. Robert Henderson. At his tea last fall, planned in honor of Mrs. Rousseau, she was unable to get here for the fete.

So-o-oo yesterday Mr. Van Devanter gathered in almost all of the visitor's Washington friends of old standing and invited a large group of newcomers who are a part of the Washington cene today to mee his old friend, who severed ties with the Capital a number of years ago to make her home in Fairfield, Conn.

Comfortable Living Quarters for Wartime Workers Chief Concern of FPHA Economist

Blanche Halbert's Accomplishment as Furniture Designer Proves Little Money Can Go Long Way

By Martha Rhyne

When Mary Smith closes the doors on her ivy-covered cottage in Middletown and goes to the West Coast to take her place in the assembly line at Lockheed, her chief concern will be finding a place to live. For while she does her part to put together B-19s for her husband, John, overseas, to tear apart the Third Reich, she wants to know that for the sake of putting her best foot forward in war production, she will have a comfortable place in which to spend her leisure time.

Here in Washington, the Federal Public Housing Authority has been concerned with Mary's problem, too. For nine months this organization has planned war apartment and dormitory units for war workers in the congested West Coast and Southern Seaboard areas, where are concentrated the aircraft and shipbuilding industries and large ordnance plants. The truth is that these areas are crowded to the walls, to such an extent that the District of Columbia looms an open meadow by comparison. Not only is the FPHA building these housing units, but they are studying furnishings, maintenance and low-cost rents.

Even furniture design has gone to war. And therein lies the story of the vital war job of Miss Blanche Halbert, home economist of the FPHA, who with a foundation of fifteen years of study of furniture design and family livability, is devoting all her time and knowledge to the cause of Mary's comfort.

Results on Display At Longfellow Building

Miss Halbert, a native of Wisconsin and a graduate of the University of Wisconsin with an A.B. degree in economics, now exhibits with pride the fruits of her years of study of furniture and its effect on the family unit by presenting quality, functional and low cost furniture that defense workers might have what they deserve in the way of comfortable rooms and apartments at a minimum cost to them.

During the long months of consultation with fellow economists and furniture manufacturers, Miss Halbert has initiated design, studied tooling and machinery necessary for turning out these furnishings, and has gone over the manufacturers' product with a fine-tooth comb, ever looking for needless flaws, new improvements and enchantment of appearance.

As a result, she now has on display at the Longfellow Building, which houses the FPHA, one of the most amazing, economical, and attractive displays of furniture ever manufactured in this country. And, although the furniture designed for the war dormitories will be bought by the Government, the furniture manufcturers are not restricted to selling their product to Uncle Sam alone. The vivacious home economist hopes that this trend in modern furniture will bring about a new program of consumer education after the war and will enable families to buy furniture to meet their needs and to make for more attractive homes for the averag- citizen.

Mrs. Roosevelt Was Impressed

Eyes trained for scrutinizing and appraising furniture value, as well as the untrained eyes of a young bride, fall with admiration on the results of Miss Halbert's work. Mrs. Roosevelt, visiting the project recently, was deeply impressed with the appearance of these furnishings, their visible quality and sturdiness and their low purchasing and maintenance costs.

Into a room with an area of 70 square feet, the size of the single rooms in the new dormitories, goes $49.15 worth of furniture. Hardly enough to furnish a bed for the sleeping porch, you'd think—but entirely adequate after Miss Talbert analyzes and explains the room's furnishings. There is a spacious chest-desk, compact, finished to prevent dust collection by the simple rounding of the baseboards. The second drawer of the chest-desk opens into a writing table with pigeonhole framework. The desk is finished, as is all the furniture, with water stain, which permeates the wood and brings out the grain, a lovely design in itself. Two coats of clear lacquer over the furniture prevent staining, cracking and scratching and give a smooth, easily cleaned finish. The baseboards are lifted just enough to allow a broom beneath this compact article which usually is the chief offender in collecting dust.

The bed, a three-quarter width of 39 inches, is of the same hardy wood, made with low head and foot and slat design to conserve wood, ever getting scarcer, due to wartime demand. The new "victory" bedspring, incased in wood, uses 9 pounds of steel, in comparison with the 18 pounds used in its sister spring of prewar days. A 38-pound mattress is used to compensate for the smaller steel content. An occasional chair, with wide-spread legs, washable, replaceable leatherette cover and arm rests, can be used for the pleasures of relaxing, reading or writing at the chest-desk. Closet space is allowed in the walls, to be inclosed with a curtain when in use.

All this at a cost of $49.15, providing as much as the average bedroom in a private home. And the rental costs to a person for a single room is from $4 to $5 per week. For a double room, the cost is from $3 to $4 per week per person.

Should Be Cheap And Practical

More furniture is provided for the apartments designed for two persons, apartments which will rent at a cost of $7 to $8 per person. Linens and towels are not included in the furniture costs but are furnished by the Government and are listed as maintenance costs.

Economy in use of critical materials and practicability are two of Miss Halbert's most important accomplishments in this job. This war worker with a purpose has not only created comfortable living quarters for Mary Smith, defense worker, but will, no doubt, contribute greatly to consumer education of the future.

For when Mary Smith and husband, John, return to the little ivy-covered nest in Middletown to resume peacetime living, they will probably carry a lot of Miss Halbert's practical ideas with them.

This alert, interested person who spent 10 years studying interior designs, family habits and furniture structure at the Rockefeller Foundation Agency, has little to say to interviewers about herself—she wants to talk furniture—compact, neat, wearable furniture—furniture that has gone to war!

Methodist Youth To Hear Address

Miss Ruth Brammell, chairman of the evangelism committee of the Washington East Methodist-District Youth Fellowship, will address Trinity Methodist youths tomorrow at 6:30 p. m. at Fifth and Seward Square Southeast. A Lenten preaching mission will open at the church Thursday at 8 p. m., continuing weekly at that time, with the Rev. Hartwell F. Chandler, pastor of Bethesda Methodist Church, assisting in the services.

Three Churches Will Unite In Services

The congregations of First Baptist, Calvary Baptist and New York Avenue Presbyterian Churches will unite in services at First Baptist Church tomorrow at 8 p. m. The combined choirs of 250 voices will sing the anthems, "Open Our Eyes" by MacFarland, "When Children Pray by Fenner and "Behold Now, Praise the Lord" by Titcomb. Dr. Clarence W. Cranford will preach on "When Jesus Passes By."

The entire choir of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church will sing the "Requiem" of Mozart on March 14. This work is one of the most stirring and popular oratorios. Mozart was commissioned to write the "Requiem" by a total stranger. As he worked he became more and more engrossed in his subject and came to the conviction that the stranger had been instructed by God to commission him to write his own "Requiem." Whether of prophesy or good guessing, the first singing of this oratorio was at the composer's funeral service.

March 30 at 8 p. m. Thomas H. Webber, jr., renowned organist, will appear in recital in the sanctuary of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. He is at present organist of the Idlewilde Presbyterian Church in Memphis, Tenn. This will be the first recital on the new organ which was dedicated on July 5, 1942. The organ was a gift of Mrs. George W. White, in memory of her husband, and was installed by Ernest M. Skinner & Son. The original organ in this church was a gift of Alexander Shepherd, the last Governor of the District of Columbia, and was installed in 1873. The present instrument embodies the advances made possible by the electro-pneumatic mechanism, the modern developments in wind distribution, the tonal traditions of yesterday with the enchanting voices of today and a console having every modern convenience for the organist.

17th Soldiers' Rally Slated Tonight

The Rev. John Ballbach, associate pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist Church, will speak at the seventeenth Christian youth and servicemen's rally tonight at Almas Temple, 1315 K Street Northwest. Free suppers are given to servicemen at 6:30 p. m., girls of the Christian Business Girls' Association doing the serving.

A broadcast over Station WOL will be released at 8 p. m. Tonight the young people's choir of the Metropolitan Baptist Church will assist in the music, in which service men take part.

Pugh and Kelly Bible Classes Hold Anniversary Banquets

Among participants in annual banquet of Clyde Kelly Bible Class this week at Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church were, left to right, Representative Joseph R. Bryson, South Carolina; H. W. Stewart, class president, and Theodore R. McKeldin, Baltimore attorney and churchman, and Republican candidate for Maryland Governor in the recent election, main speaker

Two well-known men's Bible classes marked their anniversaries this week at banquets that combined sociability with spiritual inspiration.

They are the A. B. Pugh Class of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, Ninth and Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, and the Clyde Kelly Class of Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church, Chevy Chase Circle.

Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, addressing the thirty-seventh annual banquet of the Pugh class, warned that the church "must speak with a united voice" or the world will not listen to its message.

District Court Justice Bolitha J. Laws, Pugh class teacher, sans law books and judicial robes, showed he is no slouch as a wit, in a number programed as "wisecracks," which tickled the ribs of fellow classmen and wives.

Judge Eugene Black, of the Board of Tax Appeals and Pugh class vice president, was toastmaster for the dinner. Ernest E. Bearden is president of the class—founded in 1886 and one of the city's oldest Bible groups. Earl Carson was banquet chairman. The class will hold its annual past presidents' day March 14, when 19 past presidents are expected to attend.

As the Clyde Kelly Class held its annual dinner in Chevy Chase, the main speaker was Theodore McKeldin, Republican candidate for Maryland Governor in the recent election and a prominent Baltimore churchman.

Crossing denominational lines in a spirit of Christian fellowship, two well-known congregations exchanged felicitations during their anniversary fetes this week.

Dr. Blanchard

As first Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest, marked its 141st anniversary at its weekly prayer meeting, a congratulatory telegram was read from the Rev. Paul W. Yinger, whose Cleveland Park Congregational flock was enjoying its silver jubilee banquet at 3400 Lowell Street Northwest.

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden went to the telephone after the First Baptist services to extend felicitations to the Cleveland Park Church through Mr. Yinger.

Dr. William Carl Ruediger, former dean of George Washington University's school of education, was toastmaster for the Cleveland Park Church function, at which a historical sketch was presented by Mrs. E. A. Back.

Dr. John Faulkner Frazer, pastor of Baltimore's University Baptist Church, addressed the First Baptist celebration.

Dr. Ferdinand Q. Blanchard, of Cleveland, Ohio, Moderator of the Congregational Christian Churches, will speak tomorrow at 11 a. m. at Cleveland Park Church, and the Rev. Charles W. F. Smith, Canon of the Washington Cathedral, at the interdenominational service at 8 p. m.

Christian Youth Federation Aids Goodwill Among Groups

Robert Crammer Describes Work Of Organization

(This is the fifth and concluding article in a series about the wartime role of the Washington Federation of Churches, whose annual budget drive is now in progress. This year's goal is $38,000.)

By Robert Crammer
Chairman, executive committee, Federation of Christian Youth

The objective of the Washington Federation of Christian Youth is to strengthen goodwill among all the Protestant youth groups in the city of Washington and vicinity; to promote a feeling of oneness, brotherhood and fellowship; and to provide a means of effective work in areas where united Christian youth action is desirable.

The difficulties which arose in obtaining the cooperation of young peoples' groups in supporting the presentation of a city-wide preaching mission a couple of years ago, clearly indicated the need of some group which could bring such young peoples groups into united action.

This need is more imperative than ever now, since thousands of young people have arrived in our city to work and to live for the duration. They are in need of the spiritual influence of a church. The Washington Federation of Churches has organized a defense commission to supervise and coordinate the work of introducing these people to our churches.

Group Opportunities

The young peoples groups of the various churches can tie in with the defense commission and play an active and important role in providing these newcomers with both the opportunity for worship with other persons of the same age, and social contacts with those who have the high ideals of a Christian.

There are many other fields of activity in which united action or coordinated planning on the part of young peoples church groups can contrible to the promotion of church work in Washington. Most of the members of young peoples' groups have a deep sense of social responsibility, but past efforts to provide a means of putting this social-mindedness to work have often been haphazard.

Just one example: At Christmas time many groups sing carols at various hospitals and institutions. Because of a lack of planning and coordination, the results have been spotty and none too good. The Federation of Christian Youth hopes to be of service by clearing for such work and thus make the service rendered more effective and the benefits received by all concerned more gratifying.

Much Larger Work

In Washington where there are a score or more of churches in each of the larger denominations, the young people have had a union for the individual denomination and ended there, with the exception of the Disciples of Christ Youth Fellowship and the Presbyterian Young People's League societies which have cooperated in the D. C. Christian Endeavor Union. Now when we undertake to do a much larger work, that work which no single church or denomination can do alone, for the servicemen stationed in the vicinity, visiting, or passing through the city; for the women in the armed services; for the war workers, particularly those shortly to take up residence in dormitories; and the current civic problems affecting us as individuals, the need for an all-inclusive interdenominational, interracial approach is apparent and vital.

Each city-wide protestant church youth organization and each denomination represented in the Washington Federation of Churches is eligible for membership in the Federation of Christian Youth. Other protestant youth organizations may be admitted upon written application and its acceptance. Representatives constitute an assembly meeting twice a year, or at the call of the executive committee.

ROBERT CRAMMER

On November 11, 1942, officers were elected for the Washington Federation of Christian Youth, thereby giving new impetus to the official young people's division of the Washington Federation of Churches.

Organization Leaders

The executive committee consists of five voting members: at present: Chairman, Bob Crammer, Presbyterian, president of the District of Columbia Christian Endeavor Union; secretary-treasurer, Virginia Horsman, East Washington District of Methodist Youth Fellowship; Frances Simon, president of the Congregational Christian Pilgrim Fellowship; Oliver Propert, Baptist Young People's Union; Hugo Eskildson, Augustana Synod Luther League.

Two advisers are: Grover Hartman, director of the Defense Commission of the Churches; Francis McPeek, director of the Social Welfare Department of the Washington Federation of Churches.

A new series of radio broadcasts under the direction of the Federation began on February 5. The program, "Midnight Vespers," may be heard on Station WMAL each Friday at 11:45 p. m. Youth choirs from the churches, singing hymns and anthems, take a prominent part. Youth representatives present the devotions, consisting of scripture reading, prayer and brief inspirational thoughts. To attract young folks to church activities, three or four events are announced each week.

The Washington Federation of Christian Youth believes its most effective work can be accomplished by assisting churches and church groups in doing their work rather than by competing with them. Our aim is to be of service. No matter how small or how large the job may be, we will try to do our share by being the servants and working for the youth groups of the churches, the Washington Federation of Churches, of which we are a part; the Defense Commission, the Social Welfare Department, or other groups, whenever and wherever the opportunity presents itself.

More District Churches Fly Service Flags

More and more service emblems —some bearing gold stars—are beginning to appear in local and nearby churches, as the tempo of the global war increases.

Wesley Methodist Church at Connecticut Avenue and Jocelyn Streets Northwest, unveiled its service plaque last Sunday, honoring its 36 men and 1 WAAC.

Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest, tomorrow at 11 a. m. will dedicate a service flag honoring its 100 men in the armed forces. The emblem is a gift of Mrs. T. J. Gattis in memory of her husband. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor, and Senate chaplain, will preach on "The Sacrament of Service. Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, Methodist resident bishop, will speak at 8 p. m.

And tomorrow at 7:45 p. m., the congregation of Albright Memorial Evangelical Church, Fourth and Rittenhouse Streets Northwest, will add 10 stars to its service flag—making a total of 70 stars.

The service last Sunday at Wesley Church was addressed by Army Chaplain Harry C. Fraser, and conducted by the Rev. Clarence E. Wise, pastor. The gold stars honored Richard Valiant Singleton, killed on Gaudalcanal, October 14, 1942, and Bernard F. Hickman, killed in England in January 1943. Lieut. Clare W. Hall is the WAAC.

Other names on the plaque are: Robert F. Schroder, Seth Everett Barron, Raymond Berthrong, Morgan Berthrong, Walter Bennett, Daniel Long Belvin, Robert Howard Bucknell, Robert Artel Case, David Alan Dryer, Russell James Funk, Bernard F. Hickman, Walter Warren Hill, John Henry Hoskinson, G. Baptists of Highland Park, Greenway, Stoddert and Fort Dupont Dwellings, Benning and River Terrace are especially invited.

D. C. Lenten Services Planned As Holy Season Approaches

Observances By Congregation Set For Coming Week

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

Lent—Christendom's holiest season—will begin during the coming week with solemn Ash Wednesday services in locals and nearby churches.

Meanwhile, a number of churches have planned pre-Lenten services for tomorrow, when the "Our Capital for Christ" Lenten evangelistic project will begin with a lay workers' training conference at First Baptist Church, Sixteenth and O Streets Northwest, at 4 p. m. Dr. Jesse M. Bader, director of the evangelism department, Federal Council of Churches, will speak. The "Our Capital for Christ" project is being sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches committee on evangelism, of which Dr. Robin Gould is chairman, and the Rev. George E. Schnabel, chairman of the special committee for the project.

Services Thursday

The Federation of Churches will sponsor Lenten services each Thursday beginning March 11 from 5:30 to 6 p. m. at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street Northwest, with Dr. J. Warren Hastings, pastor of National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle, as opening speaker.

Subsequent speakers will be the Rev. Paul W. Yinger, Cleveland Park Congregational Church, March 18; the Rev. Fred V. Poag, Second Presbyterian Church, Alexandria, Va., March 25; Dr. J. Harold Mumper, Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, April 1; the Rev. M. Chandler Stith, Brookland Baptist, April 8; the Rev. Orris G. Robinson, Calvary Methodist, April 15, and the Rev. Ira Sankey Ernest, Memorial United Brethren Church, April 22.

In Catholic Churches

Roman Catholic churches will follow their ancient custom of blessing and distributing ashes at Ash Wednesday masses. At Immaculate Conception Church, Eighth and N Streets Northwest, ashes will be blessed and distributed at 6:45 a. m., and also distributed at 7:30, 8:30 a. m. and 12:15 and 7:45 p. m. Dr. John K. Cartwright is pastor.

The Episcopal Church of the Epiphany has a full Lenten program arranged, with special services featuring some of the greatest preachers in America every noonday except Saturday and Sunday.

This week on Ash Wednesday noon Dr. Charles Sheerin, rector, will be the preacher, but on Thursday and Friday the special preacher will be the Rev. Vincent C. Franks, rector of St. Paul's, Richmond, Va.

Dr. Franks is a specialist in preaching. On graduation from the Virginia Seminary he took postgraduate work at Union Seminary in New York, and early in his career established himself as a preacher of note. He was rector in Lexington, Va., serving as chaplain of Virginia Military Institute and adviser to the students of Washington and Lee. This was followed by a rectorship at St. Paul's, Norfolk, and St. Stephen's, Philadelphia. For four years he

U. S. Chaplains Duck Bullets On Firing Line

Army chaplains duck Jap bullets and bombs on the South Pacific fronts just as combat soldiers do. They slip in and out of fox holes and trenches, talk religion and about the folks back home. They go armed with nothing more than a Bible and hymn book. And the rank and file of the soldiers welcome the chaplains.

Chaplain Lennie S. Dubberly, in Buna, said in a report made public by the War Department yesterday that the men on the battle lines are much more religious than might be supposed. "They've told me they pray very often," he added, "especially in the thick of a fight."

Chaplain Dubberly himself was wounded by a Jap bullet the day after Christmas. In his report he merely mentioned the fact and hastened to say "I'm more proud than ever that I'm a chaplain in the United States Army."

Chaplain Dubberly, a Methodist from Prosper, Tex., left Port Moresby with his outfit by plane on November 8 and landed on the other side of the Owen Stanley Range. "From there we started walking," he said, "carrying everything that we needed. One Bible, one New Testament, one song book that had various services and a ritual in it, one fountain pen, 20 sheets of paper, 50 altar breads and one small bottle of wine was all the professional equipment I had. We marched for 10 days through a most difficult jungle trail. I marched at the end of the line with a portable hospital unit.

Bishop West To Preach At Cathedral

The Right Rev. George West, D. D., Bishop of Rangoon, who will preach at the evensong service tomorrow at 4 p. m. in Washington Cathedral, has lived in Burma for the last 20 years. The subject of his sermon will be "Burma's Fall and America's Destiny."

Bishop West

He has had a distinguished and eventful career. During the last World War he was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action while serving with the British Artillery. Shortly before the invasion of his country in 1941 he had the distinction of being the only Englishman ever invited by the Burmese people to address them on their national day celebration.

When in Atlanta last winter, taking part in the national program for moral reamament, he was invited to represent for some time the Bishop of Atlanta, between the election and consecration of the Right Rev. John Walker.

His later addresses before the Commonwealth Club of San Francisco over the radio to Burma were so well received that, at the request of the Office of War Information, he again spoke over the radio to India from California.

Commenting on Gandhi's fast and other newes from India, Bishop West said recently: "In the present situation, a full meeting of the minds may be difficult. But it would at least be more possible if there were first a meeting of the hearts."

Miss Perkins Slated to Talk At St. Paul's

The Secretary of Labor, Frances Perkins, will give the address at the conference sponsore by the American Church Union tomorrow evening at St. Paul's Episcopal Church, 917 Twenty-third Stree Northwest. Miss Perkins has chosen as the subject of her talk "Christian Responsibility for the Social Order." Her interest in social and economic problems in New York State prior to accepting the post as Secretary of Labor, as well as her continued interest in social betterment make her talk on this subject of particular interest to churchmen. Before becoming Secretary of Labor, Miss Perkins served as commissioner of the New York State Industrial Commission, and on related boards and commissions in the State. While in New York she was a member of the parish of the Church of the Resurrection.

The public is invited to the address by Miss Perkins and to the informal social gathering to follow in the parish house, where light refreshments will be served. Solemn evensong and benediction in the church at 8 o'clock will conclude the March meeting of the American Church Union.

Still all my song shall be, nearer, my God to Thee,
Nearer, my God, to Thee, nearer to Thee.
Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS
Mrs. Adams' message of universal appeal was inspired by the biblical story of Jacob, who fleeing from Esau's wrath, slept on a lonely hillside, dreamed of a heavenly ladder with angels ascending and descending on it, and awoke with renewed faith. It is a triumphant revelation that even in depths of despair, we may be lifted closer to God.

HARRY CLAUDE STANLEY GLENN

Mrs. Sherman Wells, prominent member of the Crossman Methodist Church of Falls Church, Va., has all of her four sons in Uncle Sam's fighting ranks today. Her husband is superintendent of the Crossman Sunday School.

The sons are Claude M., 29, second lieutenant in the United States Cavalry; Stanley, 28, sergeant in the paratroops; Harry, 26, of the Army Air Corps, and Glenn, 22, of the Army's antiaircraft division. All are members of the Crossman Church, with the exception of Glenn, who is affiliated with the Falls (Episcopal) Church.

A group of vocally-minded folk met recently at the home of the Rev. F. W. Haverkamp, 304 Virginia Avenue, Alexandria, Va., for the purpose of organizing a choir for the Westminister Presbyterian Church.

Elected to serve as officrs for the rest of the church fiscal year were Mrs. L. C. Lindner, president; Miss Dorothy Nelson, vice president; Mrs. S. L. Kutz, secretary; Miss Marth A. Riddick, treasurer; S. L. Kutz, director, and John E. Peck, accompanist.

Dr. Raymond C. Sorrick, president of the Maryland Synod, United Lutheran Church, has resigned the important pulpit of Messiah Lutheran Church, Baltimore, to further the work of the infant St. Luke Lutheran Church in Silver Spring, Md., where the Rev. Frederick J. Eckert was formerly pastor.

He comes from Nome to the Nation's Capital to relate his experiences on America's Burma Road. Christian Pastors Select Sermon Topic

"Disciples of Christ on the March" will be the subject of the sermon by the pastors of the 20 churches of Disciples of Christ (Christian) throughout the metropolitan area of Washington tomorrow at 11 a. m. the Rev. J. Lloyd Black, director of the Christian Church Council of Metropolitan Washington, announced yesterday.

Each minister will present the message to his people following a somewhat similar line of thought.

This simultaneous use of the same subject, interpreting the message of the Communion, in the light of the present world situation, offers an unusual innovation in church programs.

The Disciples' churches and pastors are:

Dr. J. Warren Hastings, National City Church, Thomas Circle; Columbia Heights, 1435 Park Road Northwest, the Rev. Harry L. Bell; Park View, the Rev. George M. Anderson; Third, the Rev. Leslie L. Are they confined to one place or may they choose? Do they retain their senses of sight, hearing, smell, taste and touch? Do they experience joy, sorrow or pain?

On Tuesday night Ford will speak on "Spiritualism: Do the Dead Actually Appear?" Wednesday night, "Who Are the Spirits That Operate in Spiritualism?" Thursday night, "What Is the Soul?" Friday night, "Who Are the Angels?" and Saturday afternoon he will give a special sermon. On Sunday at 12:30 p. m. he will broadcast over radio station WOL.

Attempt to Stifle Elmer Davis' OWI

NOT LONG ago Cordell Hull informed the President that he wanted a committee of Cabinet officers including the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Knox; the Secretary of War, Mr. Stimson, plus Elmer Davis, Chief of War Information, and the President himself to sit down and decide whether Edgar Mowrer, crack Chicago News correspondent recently with the Office of War Information, should receive a passport to go to North Africa.

Elmer Davis, who is Mowrer's chief, had ordered him to go, but Hull was opposed, so Hull wanted the President and other high-ranking Cabinet officers to decide the matter.

Mr. Roosevelt replied that he felt the matter of a passport for Edgar Mowrere could be decided by his Cabinet members without him, and hinted that the President of the United States had more important things to worry about.

In the end, Secretary Hull decided to give Mowrer the passport, but by this time there had been so much delay and so much argument that Mowrer in disgust resigned.

The incident is important not so much because of the personalities involved, but because it illustrates the manner in which various Government departments, especially the State Department, have endeavored to block the Office of War Information.

Evolved From Chaos

That office was formed with the almost unanimous approval of the Nation, certainly of the newspapers. It evolved from a confused group of bureaus—the Office of Facts and Figures, the Bureau of Government Information and other information agencies, sometimes working at cross purposes. Elmer Davis was appointed to weld them together, and he has done a good job. He has done it despite, not because of, other Government departments.

It is almost inconceivable that other agencies should have put so many obstacles in hi path. Cables sent to him by his field representatives are frequently censored by the State Department. U. S. diplomats set themselves up as judges as to whether certain information should reach Davis.

Davis' men cannot get priorities on airplanes. Military commanders in various areas can decide whether or not they want representatives of the OWI attached to them, and their word is final.

But, worst of all, the State Department frequently exercises the high-handed privilege of deciding whether or not certain OWI men should get passports. If the State Department doesn't like their politics, or what they have done as newsmen, then the State Department blocks their passports.

Delay Technique

THE PRESIDENT has given a directive that all OWI passports shall be cleared. And immediately after receipt of that directive they were cleared. But now the State Department has adopted the expedient of delay and delay and delay.

In North Africa the State Department refused to let the OWI take over the local radio station, and permitted the Moroccan radio to continue pouring out pro-Vichy propaganda for weeks after the American occupation.

Friction has become so acute that recently the irate Mr. Hull proposed privately that the OWI be abolished. Elmer Davis, however, is sticking to his guns, and gradually seems to be coming out on top.

Mme. Chiang's Carnation

Lieut. Col. William N. McKelvy, one of our greatest Marine heroes, recently received another award in addition to the Navy Cross he won for bravery at Guadalcanal. It is a red carnation from a bouquet belonging to Madame Chiang Kai-shek, and behind this is the story.

Among the many sightseers who flocked to Capitol Hill the day Madame Chiang addressed Congress was a little white-haired lady, who stood in the corridor outside Speaker Rayburn's office for almost an hour waiting to glimpse China's famous first lady.

She could not get a ticket to the House gallery, and had to be satisfied with a peek into the Speaker's office filled with carnations which Congressmen had ordered for Madame Chiang. The white-haired lady herself wore a corsage of iris, a flower loved by the Chinese.

The corsage caught Madame Chang's eye as she left the Speaker's office for the House floor. She paused for a split second to gaze at it, looked up, smiled into the face of the wearer, then passed on.

Some minutes later, William T. Roy, assistant parliamentarian, emerged from the Speaker's office with a red carnation, which he handed to the woman.

"With the compliments of Madame Chiang Kai-shek," said Roy.

That is how a package bearing a red carnation came to be in the mails that night for Lieut. Col. William N. McKelvy, somewhere in the Pacific. The white-haired lady who received it had every reason to send the "mascot" to McKelvy. She is his mother.

Embryo Sailors

WHILE merchant ships are being turned out at the rate of four per day, each one demanding a new crew, men who have completed a seaman's training course at Sheepshead Bay, Long Island, are straining at the leash, unable to get into service.

This training school was established by War Shipping Administration to supply crews for Liberty Ships. Today nearly 2000 men are at Sheepshead Bay, having completed the three months' course, but can't get the necessary discharge to go to sea.

WSA explains that these trainees must be mixed with veteran seamen, that ships cannot absorb them all at once.

But this doesn't quiet the restlessness at Sheepshead Bay. Despite certain dangers ahead, and the disastrous toll by submarines, the young sailors want to get to sea.

Some of the men have tried to get away by finding jobs for themselves with shipping lines. Even then, however, WSA declines to release them, on the ground that the union hiring agreements must be followed, for the protection of experienced seamen.

Police Scout Ambulances Ordered to All Accidents

Orders calling for "maximum use" of scout car ambulance to transport injured persons to hospitals were issued to Police Department members yesterday.

Containing six specific rules, the orders were put out by Inspector Harvey G. Callahan, executive officer, as a direct result of two incidents this week, in which traffic victims suffered 30-minute delays in receiving medical aid because of inadequate hospital ambulance service.

"Ambulance equipment was purchased for the express purpose of providing transportation of injured persons to hospitals," Callahan stated, "and unless it is utilized, the department is properly subject to adverse criticism.

"Officers must not shirk their responsibilities in these cases."

Callahan's order provided that a scout car ambulance be dispatched to the scene of every accident by the radio dispatcher. He said that each precinct except the Harbor has one of the these cars.

The scout cars will respond even though a hospital ambulance has been dispatched. Duplication of equipment, the inspector said, will be justified in providing aid for human suffering.

Instructions to the police radio station ordered broadcasts about injured persons be given priority over all other calls, with ambulance cars responding "by the most direct route and at the greatest speed consistent with the observance of safe driving rules."

Personnel in the police ambulances must be those who have completed at least the standard first-aid course prescribed by the American Red Cross, and should be familiar with the proper methods of handling injured persons, the inspector said.

"Policemen with such training," said he, "should exercise their own judgment with respect to procedure, and should not permit themselves to be influenced by the well-intended, but frequently wrong, suggestions of citizens at the scene."

Policemen will prepare victims for transportation as soon as they arrive, Callahan directed, and will take the person to a hospital unless an ambulance comes before they get under way.

Drills in the use of the ambulance eqhipment will be held at least once a week under the direction of precinct commanders and "occasionally without the use of lights at night so that the men may be prepared to make use of this equipment during blackouts."

Lucy's Cards To 'Dearest' Bedevil Men

By the Associated Press

Kansas City, March 5—From Tuscaloosa, Ala., came the dainty postcard:

"Dearest—Do you remember, after all these years? I will put a personal in Sunday's Star, Lucy."

The husband, to whom the card was addressed, said honest, he didn't know any Lucy. The wife reserved judgment.

Then, in Sunday's personal column:

"Dearest—So sorry I can't keep our date for the 9th, but will spend the evening with you the 12th, sure. I will put a personal in next Sunday's Star to tell you where. Lucy."

The clamor reached the ears of police, who investigated Tuscaloosa Lucy. She had written 490 of the cards, officers learned.

Lee Vaughan, Kansas City, Kans., president of the Kansas City Alumni Association of Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity, told all last night. The cards were just to advertise the fraternity founders' day banquet the night of March 12, he admitted. Lucy was a fictitious character.

Among the victims:

Mayor John B. Gage, (smugly): "Mine came to the office."

Francis C. Wornall, fire director: "My wife handed me Lucy's message and said, 'Here's a card for you.' I didn't say anything."

Miles W. Gates: "My wife called and said, 'Who is this screwball, Lucy?' I reminded my wife how busy I'd been. . . ."

Income taxes should be paid out of savings of current income, if possible. But if you have been unable to save up enough to pay your taxes and you expect to borrow now and repay from income, investigate Household's plan. No endorsers needed—no credit inquiries. If your tax is $200, you borrow $50 on March 15 and repay in 3 monthly installments of $17.34. Thus the loan cost is only $2.02.
